Welcome to our 22nd edition and our first free Canada-wide eBook!!! Our goal with this Guide and www.senioropolis.com[®] is, and will continue to be, ever-evolving as we endeavour to ensure that our information is accurate and helpful for our users. For the past two decades, we have made every effort to grow both our book and website through the addition of homes, articles and resources that meet the changing needs of Canada's seniors.

With a view to expanding our online presence, in 2018 we launched a new, second website, www.seniorcareaccess.com. As a member-only site, it prides itself on being inclusive and a constantly updated source of the most complete and accurate Canada-wide information in the industry, allowing for competitive and comparative searches of the growing number of housing options in the retirement living sector.

For those of you who are new to us from other parts of Canada....Welcome. Creating a book like this with information on multiple provinces is a daunting task on many levels. Besides the issue of the thousands of homes and seniors' resources that operate within our vast country, there is a lack of consistency of terminology from one province to the next and in some cases, this applies to regulation as well. Not all provinces have legislation governing senior care homes despite the significant growth in the industry over the last couple of decades. As well, some provinces have a variety of care options and public funding while others do not. Even with the great resources available on the "world wide web", finding information on many places can be difficult. Still, when it was suggested that we turn what has been an Ontario-only hard copy book into a Canada-wide eBook this year, despite knowing that there was still much work to do, it did seem like the next logical step for a resource that is well-established and well-used in Ontario. To this end, this edition has homes in Ontario, BC, Alberta and Saskatchewan. The information in Part 1 and Part 3 is reflective of this. It is our hope that over time, homes in other provinces will decide to participate in this eBook and as that happens, our information section will expand to include them as well. We know that with this edition, we will reach people who have never accessed our publication. So, this, our first Canada-wide free eBook is the start of a new 'chapter' for us as we endeavour to become the Comprehensive Guide to Retirement Living for seniors across Canada.

As I reflect on the past 22 years, it is clear that none of it — book, websites, CD or Apps — would exist were it not for our devoted supporters — our readers, our advertisers, various residences spanning Canada, professionals who use our Guide and refer people to it, and some very special people I need to thank, who help recreate this book every year from beginning to end.

The creation and continuity of this Guide would not have been possible without the assistance of the following important people: Kate Hemi for her lifelong support, encouragement, guidance, business expertise and teaching by example; BTT Communications for the endless hours of hard work and assistance in making this 22nd edition something we could all be proud of; Donna Beker, our account executive, who spent many hours working with existing contacts and making many new ones in order to create this edition; Bart Garner of NTech, our very responsive and creative webmaster, for his expertise and work on both of our websites and Jeff Schnurr and his team at In View Marketing for growing our social media presence.

Those of us involved in the production of this book would like to extend a special thank you to those who recognize its value and trust us enough to participate in its content: the residences that choose to be in our publication and the advertisers who purchase space throughout it. We welcome our many new supporters and again thank our regulars who faithfully respond to our quest for information and support year after year.

We would also like to thank Nikki Lewis and Esprit Lifestyle Communities for providing us with the photographs we used on our cover and dividers this year; and Matt Del Vecchio of Lianas Inc., Adrian Walton of Resolved Executor Services, Bayshore Home Health, and Harvey Goldstein, Barrister, Solicitor and Mediator for their contribution of articles in our SERVICES AND RESOURCES FOR SENIORS IN ONTARIO section (Part 2). As well, for reviewing, updating and assisting with information on their organizations, we thank Helen Simeon, Senior Manager Communications, RHRA; Debbie Humphreys, Senior Director Corporate and Public Affairs, AdvantAge Ontario; Kim Lucchetta, Manager Public Affairs and Digital Communications, OLTC; and Central LHIN staff.

And finally, to those of you who have contributed and continue to do so without even knowing it:

To my many clients past, present, and future:

You have helped give me an understanding of the significance and meaning of my work, of dedication and devotion to aging relatives and of the importance of continuing this project.

Esther Goldstein

“What place would you choose for your parent?”

During the many years that I worked as a hospital social worker with seniors who required relocation, this was the most common question the families of my elderly clients would ask me. It was – and still is – a most difficult one to answer. My experience has taught me that it is not wise to recommend a specific retirement or senior care residence, especially for someone I don't know. I believe that even those of us who know some objective information about these settings should not decide which one is the best place for someone else to call 'home'. What one person might think is the perfect residence, another might not. It is imperative that the family/caregiver, and if physically possible, the person themselves, shop around and compare what is available.

The goal and purpose of this Guide is to give you the necessary tools to begin your search for the best place for yourself or a loved one. I hope it will help make what is often a difficult & emotional decision (that can be even more overwhelming if rigid time constraints are involved) a little bit easier by giving you as much information as possible as you try to navigate the options before you. I do not rate the residences detailed in this book. The information contained in the following pages is intentionally objective. However, I believe that the subjective perspective is of equal, if not greater, importance when searching for a retirement setting.

There are three very important factors that should be taken into consideration from the moment you start the process of searching for retirement accommodation – choice, cost and care. There are thousands of residences/homes across Canada, in many different price ranges, offering an array of care levels, services, features & amenities. The challenge is to narrow down the many options available to find one that best meets your or your loved one's unique needs & desires, both physically and financially now and hopefully, in the future.

It is of utmost importance that you be an informed consumer. No decision should be made without a visit to a residence, or preferably, a few residences. When looking for a retirement community meet with staff, sample a meal, speak with residents and their families, get references, spend time at the places that interest you and ask a lot of questions (see RETIREMENT RESIDENCE VISITING TIPS in Part 1). Research is equally important when looking for a long-term care home however the options are less, priorities are different and for many, time is of the essence (see LONG-TERM CARE in Part 1).

A question I am often asked is why I don't have every residence in the Guide. The answer is quite simple: although I would be very pleased if I did have comprehensive information on every setting, it is simply not possible. I cannot force retirement residences to have a presence in this publication and we do not include information on homes or resources without permission. Some homes choose to only be on our website, other choose to promote themselves through local sources rather than in a national forum such as ours. In smaller communities where there are few options, word of mouth is often the way potential residents find a place that meets their needs. That being said, our online directory is growing monthly since homes can be added to our website at any point in the year so, please visit our website to view other homes that are not in this eBook.

In compiling this edition, every residence in the country has an opportunity to participate by completing our online questionnaire. Information about the homes that chose to be in this eBook is contained in Part 3 of this Guide. I do not censor or change any of the information they provide. Essentially, Part 3 is a 'snapshot' of the data participating homes submitted to us in the summer of 2018. As a result, some pricing information may not be accurate. (Some were able to include 2019 pricing, others were not.) I encourage you to verify all information, especially the data related to cost factors, with the residences directly.

All homes on our website are invited to update their information as often as they wish online. Please visit our site regularly to check for additional homes, updated information and added features. Since all homes with detailed descriptions in this edition also have full online listings with us, you may wish to also look at the listings of homes that interest you on www.senioropolis.com[®] as many upload photos, videos, social media feeds, testimonials and events - all of which will give you a more complete picture of them and what they have to offer potential residents. I do not endorse any residence, and I take no responsibility for the information provided. It is my assumption that in choosing to be in the Guide and on www.senioropolis.com[®], each retirement residence responded accurately.

WHEN SHOULD I START TO CONSIDER OPTIONS?

The aging process for some is gradual and for others seemingly sudden. Caregivers need to watch, look and listen for signs that things are changing, and needs are increasing. It is advisable to start discussing options, if you notice that someone you care about is experiencing issues that are causing you to be concerned, such as:

- increasing/new health concerns/issues (or a recent diagnosis of a chronic illness, psychiatric illness or dementia)
- frequent visits to a hospital emergency room
- difficulties with shopping and/or preparing nutritious meals, including kitchen safety issues
- weight loss/not eating properly
- changes in habits and/or behaviours and/or personality
- change in communication patterns with friends and family
- unexplained signs of physical injury (bruising, bumps, broken bones, falls)
- difficulty performing activities they did easily in the past (either cognitively, e.g. financial management, opening and processing mail or physically, e.g. household tasks, getting up from a chair, walking, taking medications, etc.)
- difficulty looking after personal care needs (grooming, hygiene, toileting, bathing, etc.)
- issues with self-medicating/concerns about substance abuse
- cognitive issues (significant forgetfulness, poor judgment, changes in mood, confusion, wandering), loneliness or fear of being alone

While some of these issues in isolation may not be significant, a combination of a few of them may indicate a need for some intervention or assistance in the home. As a first step, you may want to speak with their family doctor. Depending on your concerns, the doctor may recommend various tests and referrals to other professionals. This may include a geriatric assessment if he/she feels it is warranted.

For the independent senior who isn't sure if they want to relocate or when the best time to move is, you might want to consider the following questions to help you to determine if you need to start thinking about options:

- Are there stairs in your home (either inside or to get inside)?
 - If yes, are you having difficulty with going up or down the stairs?
- Do you need help with any household tasks (laundry, cleaning, shopping, etc.)?
- Do you or your spouse need help with any personal care (bathing, dressing etc.)?
- Are you able to prepare nutritious meals for yourself?
- Do you have a yard/yard work/outside maintenance?
- Who does your repairs inside/outside your house?
- Do you have people who can assist you with any of the above issues now or in the future or, if you do not, can you afford to pay people to assist with any personal care or household tasks?
- If you already have people assisting you:
 - Are you happy with the service they are providing?
 - Do they provide enough to meet your needs?
 - Can they provide more if you need it?
 - Is the cost affordable?

- Are you and/or your spouse on a lot of medications?
 - If yes, are you able to keep track of when you need to take them?
- How do you get around (drive, cab, transit, family assistance)?
- Are you walking distance to important amenities (doctor, dentist, pharmacy, grocery store, etc.)?
- Do you/your spouse require any assistive devices to help you to function?
- Do you have any safety concerns?
- Has your family indicated that they have concerns about your living situation/safety?
- How is your/your spouse's hearing?
- How is your/your spouse's sight?
- Are you/your spouse forgetful?
- Do you/your spouse have any significant medical issues which require assistance or may in the near future?
- Do you feel isolated/lonely or scared at certain times of day/night?
- Do you (and your spouse) get out every day/almost every day or are you always home?
- Do you (and your spouse) have hobbies?
- Are you able to manage your finances?
- Do you/your spouse ask for help when you need it?
- Do you have a support network, friends or family nearby and available?
 - If not, would you like to move closer to family/friends?

Answering these questions honestly can serve as a 'conversation starter' as they will help you to focus in on the type of support you might need currently or, in the near future. While a few potential or minor issues may not be problematic, several might be, and may suggest a need to begin considering resources.

If, after thinking/talking about your current situation and (potential) concerns with your loved ones, it seems that in the somewhat near future, you might need either additional help in your own home or to relocate to a place where there are more supports to enable you to remain independent, it may be time to start looking at the options available to you based on your current financial, physical and social situation. Discuss any concerns you have with your family and your doctor, so they can assist you in locating supports in your area. As you will see as you work through the content of this book, it is better to begin doing your research and discussing what your desires are with your family before you need the help and most certainly, before a crisis forces the issue and limits available options.

OPTIONS FOR INDEPENDENT SENIORS

It is always best to consider in-home options before addressing relocation, provided that the environment can be made safe and you/your loved one is willing to accept in-home assistance. For some, downsizing from a two-story house to a single-level apartment-style dwelling and/or obtaining adequate assistance (e.g. personal support, homemaking, meals on wheels, help with shopping or transportation, day programs, emergency response system, etc.) through your local community/seniors' agency¹ or government home care agency (e.g. Local Health Integration Network (LHIN in Ontario, Alberta Health Services in Alberta, Home and Community Care in BC, or Local Health Authority in Saskatchewan)² may be sufficient. For others, relocation to a seniors' residence may be what is necessary for them to remain independent.

¹ Fee for service would be determined by the provider. Your government home care agency may be able to arrange or provide a referral to a local community agency that has various services for seniors. Some private insurance companies may cover some services. Eligible veterans may be able to obtain assistance/funds for service from the Department of Veteran Affairs.

² Information on government funded home and community care services can be found on pages 11 - 16.

Seniors who do not need any assistance or require only minimal support or home modifications to maintain their independence, may wish to consider the following:

Home Safety & Modifications - Many independent seniors have some minor mobility, hearing or vision issues which can increase their risk of a trip, fall or accident at home. It is always wise to ensure that the home is safe, especially if the senior has any deficits or functional issues. Below are some questions that can serve as a preliminary guide to determine modifications that may need to be made to the home to ensure it is safe³. If there are concerns, you may wish to download a more extensive home safety checklist from the internet which will allow you to assess the home in greater detail.⁴

- Are there loose throw rugs or electrical cords on the floor?
- Is there any loose or frayed broom in the home?
- Is the flooring in good condition?
- Are all kitchen appliances in working order?
- Is there anything flammable in the kitchen and if so, is it safely stored?
- Is the kettle auto-shut off?
- Are you (is the senior) safe to use all kitchen appliances?
- Do any appliances pose a fire hazard? (Check cords, plugs and auto shut-off features.)
- Are there working smoke detectors and CO detectors in the home on every floor?
- Is there a fire extinguisher in the home and can you (the senior) safely use it?
- Can you (the senior) safely reach things in cupboards?
- Can you (the senior) get in and out of the bathtub without issue? If not, are there properly installed safety bars?
- Is there a non-slip surface in the bathtub?
- Is there adequate lighting in the home/hallways/bathroom/kitchen and outside the house?
- Are light switches and plugs in good working order and easy to access?
- Are there night lights in the bathroom, hallways and kitchen?
- Are walkways and stairways clear so there are no tripping hazards present?
- Are there secure stair railings wherever there are steps (inside and outside)?
- Is it easy for you (the senior) to get in and out of bed, chesterfield and chairs?
- Are medications in their original containers, easy to reach and easy to open?
- Do you (the senior) have any issues taking/remembering medications?

If you have any concerns at all about the environment or your (the senior's) ability to manage safely in it, you may want to have the home assessed by a professional to determine and fix specific safety issues or arrange for specialized equipment to assist in functioning or maintaining independence. An Occupational Therapist will be able to determine functional needs and should know if there is any specialized funding or programs that can assist with the cost of equipment/renovations.

For seniors in Ontario who are home owners with low to moderate income who know that they require some home modifications to assist with safety or functioning (i.e. ramps, handrails, chair lifts, etc.), there is a financial program in place that may be of interest. Funding (in the form of grants or forgivable loans) may be possible through The Ontario

³ These questions are not meant to replace a home assessment by a trained professional. They merely highlight areas of greatest concern for a senior. If there are significant issues in the home or if you are concerned about the person's safety, please consult an Occupational Therapist.

Renovates - Home Adaptations for Independence Program. Applications are available, and money is administered, through regional/municipal housing departments. For details, eligibility guidelines and applications visit your city's website and look under the housing category or search their website for the Ontario Renovates Program. All other provinces have similar programs to Ontario's. Information for each province's programs can be found at: BC - www.bchousing.org, Alberta - seniors-housing.alberta.ca – search for the Seniors Home Adaptation and Repair Program, Saskatchewan - www.saskatchewan.ca – search for the Home Repair Program, Manitoba - <https://www.gov.mb.ca/housing/progs/repair.html>, Quebec - www.habitation.gouv.qc.ca, New Brunswick - www2.gnb.ca/content/gnb/en/services/services_renderer.8735.Federal_Provincial_Repair_Program_.html and Nova Scotia - housing.novascotia.ca. General information about Aging in Place/Accessible Home Modifications can be found at www.cmhc-schl.gc.ca.

Independent Seniors Buildings - Relocating to an independent seniors' apartment building, where rent may be geared to income for qualified tenants may be a viable option for seniors who do not require any physical assistance. These buildings provide an opportunity to establish social relationships with other healthy seniors, and some complexes even have regularly scheduled social events and activities. Some buildings may have features or special units for seniors with physical disabilities. In some of these buildings, a doctor is available to visit tenants on-site at regularly scheduled days and times. Residents are assumed to be independent and able to manage their own care. Some seniors' buildings are affiliated with retirement homes where optional meal packages can be purchased allowing for an easy transition to the retirement residence if such a move is required in the future. Assistance with personal care or housekeeping would have to be purchased privately through a local seniors' agency or arranged through your local government homecare agency (e.g. LHIN in Ontario), unless supportive housing services (see SUPPORTIVE HOUSING on page 18) are available.

Unfortunately, there isn't a managing agency or central registry for all seniors' buildings in Ontario. If there is a building that you know of and are interested in, you should contact them directly about the application process and eligibility. In other provinces, contact your Local Housing Authority to find out if there are independent seniors' buildings in your area, where they are located and how you apply for tenancy into them.

Subsidized Independent Seniors Housing – In Ontario, if you are on a limited income and need to relocate a place that has rent geared to income, you may want to look at 'Seniors Affordable Housing' structures that are managed by local municipalities (which are the responsibility of the Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing). Contact information for Service Managers across Ontario who manage the social housing programs (there are 47 each assigned to a different municipality/area) can be found at www.mah.gov.on.ca/Page1202.aspx or you can phone your municipality and ask for your local Service Manager. They can discuss waiting lists, applications, cost factors and any other questions you may have about social housing in your area. You may also wish to check the websites for AdvantAge Ontario (www.advantageontario.ca), The Ontario Non-Profit Housing Association (www.onpha.on.ca) or Housing Connections (www.housingconnections.ca) to find out about additional options for (subsidized) independent seniors' housing.

In BC, subsidized housing (rent geared to income) for those with a limited income is available through BC Housing. An application is required and there are waiting lists for these units. Those structures that are members of The Housing Registry (not-for-profits or housing co-operatives) can be applied for through their application process, those that are not listed with the Registry require separate applications. Visit the BC Housing Registry at www.bchousing.org/housing-assistance/rental-housing/subsidized-housing to determine if you are eligible, find housing and apply for it. Additionally, you may wish to contact the Seniors Services Society which can provide information on all types of housing and services for seniors in BC. They can be reached at www.seniorsservicessociety.ca or (604) 520-6621.

In Saskatchewan, the Social Housing Program for low-income independent adults, seniors, families and disabled individuals is administered through local Housing Authorities and subsidizes rent for those in financial need that meet the necessary criteria. Rent is based on income (30% of household income) and acceptance to the program is based on several criteria including need, current housing conditions, current costs and other factors. For information on the program visit www.saskatchewan.ca/residents/housing-and-renting/renting-and-leasing/rental-housing-for-people-with-low-incomes#eligibility, contact your local Housing Authority or call 1 (800) 667-7567.

Alberta has several "affordable housing programs" for seniors including community housing, seniors' apartments and seniors' lodges. All are for independent people, based on income and need. For more information on applications and providers visit www.alberta.ca/affordable-housing-programs.aspx. Additionally, there are several housing registries in the province – www.ascha.com has a province-wide one; in Calgary visit www.kerbycentre.com and in Edmonton visit www.mysage.ca.

Co-operative Housing - Also known as 'co-op housing', it is a kind of non-profit housing in which the residents or 'members' are actively and equally involved in making decisions and running the community they live in. Co-op settings come in many shapes and sizes and can range from apartment-style dwellings to townhouse structures. The members do not usually hold any ownership in the property (it's usually owned by a co-operative corporation with an elected board of directors) but do pay monthly rent that may be income-based and possibly less than market rates depending on their situation and the rules of the co-operative. This option would be one geared to the independent person as opposed to someone with care needs. Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) has created an information guide on Co-operative Housing that can be found at www.cmhc-schl.gc.ca/en/maintaining-and-managing/co-operative-housing-guide. To locate co-operatives for seniors or where there may be a large percentage of seniors, you may wish to do an internet search for 'senior co-op housing' in your city or region. Additionally, you can contact the Co-operative Housing Federation of Canada at 1 (800) 465-2752 or <https://chfcanada.coop> and/or for those in Ontario, visit the website for The Ontario Co-operative Association at www.ontario.coop.

Senior Cohousing – Fairly new to North America, the cohousing model which combines privacy with shared resources emphasizing social, environmental and economic sustainability, originated in Denmark in the late 1960's with its first community developed by 1973. The concept reached North America in the late 1980's with the first units opening in California in 1991. A few years later, in 1994, Canada's first was built in British Columbia.

Cohousing specifically for seniors has only been around for a few years and was developed because of the benefits discovered from multi-generational cohousing occurring in Europe and parts of the USA. Still in its infancy, there are a few communities in Ontario, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Alberta and several in British Columbia. The model of senior cohousing takes elements from a few existing ones – co-op housing, Aging in Place, Life Lease and retirement living – in order to create something new and necessary as we begin to consider innovative ways to care for our increasing senior population. In most models, seniors are active participants in developing their own sense of 'community'. They buy in (and reside in the privacy of their own unit), manage the complex themselves, and share caregivers, chores, resources & common space as they deem necessary. In sharing resources and care, seniors can manage on a fixed income and with the support of others in their network, they benefit from social stimulation and emotional support. Residents are encouraged to be interdependent which encourages each persons' independence. To find out more about senior cohousing in Canada, visit <http://cohousing.ca> or <http://canadianseniorcohousing.com>.

Home Sharing – For those who want to age in place in their own home and believe they can benefit from having someone else around to help, home sharing may be a viable solution. Similar in some ways to the cohousing model, the concept dates back to the early 1980's in the USA but has recently garnered attention in Ontario as some regions have created intergenerational pilot projects to test out its viability⁵. A shared housing arrangement occurs when two people who are not related choose to live together on a long-term basis for the mutual benefits cohabiting offers. Essentially, in the context of senior housing, home sharing agencies/coordinators match elderly home owners, with younger people looking for a home. The younger 'renter' usually agrees to contribute in the form of household assistance, in exchange for reduced rent. With our increasingly expensive housing market and the reality that many seniors live in homes with more space than they need and can afford, this concept can resolve a financial issue for many on both sides of the equation.

The benefits – besides saving money for both as some expenses can be shared; and the income can be put towards the cost of running the home for the owner and rent would be less than market value for the renter – include companionship/friendship for both, assistance with household tasks (which may include shopping, cooking, light housekeeping or gardening), emergency assistance if required, and a sense of security (because someone else is in the home at night) for the senior, all of which allows them to stay independent in their own home. To a certain degree this can allow for some Aging in Place for seniors, reducing the pressure on our senior housing and long-term care system where waiting lists are increasing. However, with this concept, personal caregiving for the senior is NOT included and would have to be purchased so, for some, this would be a limiting factor.

The renter can be a younger senior, someone whose living situation is in transition or even a student. Before living together, the housemates would clarify their expectations and boundaries. It may be safest to seek out a formalized program rather than finding a 'roommate' on your own because such programs/organizations would do screenings & background checks, clarify expectations, and help to match people that seem like they would get along before arranging a meeting between potential housemates. Once a match is found, a formal contract detailing expectations and house rules (including guests, household tasks, parking, pets, use of kitchen/common areas, phone/tv/internet use and payment, itemized cost sharing parameters and privacy) should be drawn up and signed by both parties.

Reverse Mortgage - If you are over 55, own and live in your own home, an additional option may be available to you that allows you to tap into the equity in your house. If you wish to stay in your home but need money for any reason (e.g., you require care, but need an extra source of income to cover the costs) you may want to consider a reverse mortgage. With this option, a homeowner may borrow up to 55% of the appraised value of their home. The amount you can borrow is based on several factors, including age, gender, health, marital status, current interest rates and the location and appraised value of your home. The money can be used for anything. There are no required monthly payments, as long as you still live in your home. The full amount does not have to be repaid until the house is sold or the owners die, in which case the estate repays the mortgage and the accrued interest. This option is not ideal for everyone, so if it is of interest to you, you should thoroughly investigate both the pros and cons very carefully before making a commitment. Pay special attention to the impact of accrued interest on your equity over an extended time (your equity decreases as the interest accumulates). Investigate the fees involved (including legal costs), the percentage financing you will receive, and the mortgage rate being offered. You may want to compare the interest rate to that of a traditional mortgage or line of credit (usually the interest rate for a reverse mortgage is higher). Find out about early repayment and any financial penalties that may be involved. Ask for copies of all documentation prior to deciding and have a trusted friend or lawyer review them with you. You may also want to speak to your bank manager or financial advisor about other ways you may be able to free up some equity from your home. Whatever your reason for requiring extra money, consider all potential options for borrowing or using your home's equity in light of your personal situation, current needs and possible future needs before making a final decision. For additional information visit the fact sheet prepared by the Financial Consumer Agency of Canada at www.canada.ca/en/financial-consumer-agency/services/mortgages/reverse-mortgages.html.

Life Lease/Life Equity Housing - This type of residence, primarily used in the not-for-profit sector to increase housing options for the senior market, involves ownership but not in the traditional 'condominium-style' that most are familiar with. Usually, a senior would purchase a leasehold interest (the terms of which vary depending on the development) in a property when they are capable of independent living. The structure can be a townhouse or, similar to a condominium in unit size, features and monthly common expenses. The purchase price and maintenance costs are presumably more affordable than traditional housing because the sponsors are usually not-for-profit or charitable organizations. The corporation holds title to the property. It sets the eligibility guidelines for who may purchase a leasehold interest (which is the right to reside in the unit you choose and share use of the common amenities with other residents) in that structure. There is a monthly maintenance fee and the corporation maintains and manages the building.

One potential benefit of purchasing a Life Lease is that you may be able to remain at home even if your care needs increase (potentially it allows for Aging in Place). This is because many of the structures being built are connected to or affiliated with, other seniors' resources; part of this housing option is often the availability of on-site support services (which usually need to be purchased on a fee per service basis), through an affiliated seniors' agency, that can be utilized as needed. Depending on the residence, this may include: housekeeping (assistance with meals, laundry, cleaning), personal care (bathing and dressing), emergency call systems, dining/meal services, transportation, nearby or on-site amenities and activities/recreational & social services. The units may have special safety features and fixtures designed for the seniors' needs (e.g. grab bars in the bathroom). The amenities available, purchase price, maintenance fees and costs to purchase services will vary depending on the structure, sponsor, location, etc.

It is important when considering this option that you do some research and ask many questions to ensure that your needs can be met both financially and physically, now and in the future, should your health decline. As well, be sure to ask about their policies around terminating a leasehold interest and how much equity would be returned or paid to you upon a decision to vacate⁶.

It may also be wise to review all documents with a lawyer to ensure that you have a clear understanding of all the terms of the agreement prior to signing anything. If you are purchasing a Life Lease in a residence prior to construction being completed, you might want to research the organization that is sponsoring the structure and will hold title to it, so that you can learn about their reputation and previous dealings. There is no central registry for Life Lease communities; a quick internet search will provide you with the websites of several projects and articles related to this housing option.

This housing option is not available in all provinces. However, it has existed in Ontario for several years and there are many structures in place currently and under construction. In 2014 Ontario's Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing produced the Life Lease Housing Resource Guide: Questions and Answers for People Considering Life Lease Housing which can be downloaded at www.mah.gov.on.ca/AssetFactory.aspx?did=10455.

In September 2017, Bill 155, Life Lease Act, 2017 was introduced into Ontario's parliament. In October of the same year, it was referred to the Standing Committee on Regulations and Private Bills. Essentially, if passed, the landlord would be required to disclose significant information to the tenant specifically related to fees, governance and management. The landlord would also be required to have a reserve fund, necessary insurance and would have to appoint a trustee to manage the fees paid to purchase the lease⁷. For information on this proposed legislation visit www.ola.org/en/legislative-business/bills/parliament-41/session-2/bill-155.

Life lease is a growing option in the western provinces as well, though there is less information about it online for other parts of Canada than there is for Ontario. For additional information visit: www.saskatchewan.ca/residents/housing-and-renting/renting-and-leasing/life-lease-housing-for-seniors for Saskatchewan; www.mlloa.ca for Manitoba (they were the first province to enact legislation in 1999); www.cplea.ca/wp-content/uploads/LifeLeases.pdf for Alberta and www.communitylivingbc.ca/wp-content/uploads/Financing-Seniors-Equity-Final-Report-08.pdf for British Columbia. Luxury Senior Condominium Complexes - Another housing opportunity for independent seniors is essentially a combination of retirement living and condominium ownership. Developers are building independent condominium units (as townhomes or apartment buildings) that are specifically geared toward seniors. Many will have senior-friendly special features such as grab bars in the bathroom, lower light switches and easy-to-turn door handles. Most will have a choice of service packages/amenities included for a set monthly fee. Suites all have full kitchens, but some structures also have meal packages (in on-site restaurants) available to residents. Some are affiliated with, built next door to or on the same property as, retirement residences where amenities can be accessed; most can provide extra care, if necessary, for a fee. While these complexes are geared to the independent senior, they also have the potential for some Aging in Place.

Adult Lifestyle Communities/Active Adult Communities - Primarily for the younger (usually 55+) and completely independent senior or 'mature adult', these communities are commonly built in outskirt area. Usually there is an ownership component (either full ownership or Life Lease) with a multitude of shared amenities (they often have a clubhouse which houses recreation facilities; there may be a golf course, swimming pool, scheduled activities, etc.)

⁶ In most complexes, when the owner of a leasehold interest (or their estate) wishes to terminate the agreement, he or she receives funds based on the market-value of the leasehold interest of the unit. There are some residences, however, that are based on a different model, and the entitlement to increased equity at the sale or transfer of the leasehold interest is linked to the amount of the initial payment.

creating a 'resort-feel'. Residents are buying into a 'lifestyle' where they can stay active and meet others with shared interests. Structures can be bungalows, townhomes or apartment-style dwellings. Retirement is not a prerequisite and many residents still work or volunteer and have very active lives. Some newer communities may be part of a complex that has accommodation with care in a different building or services affiliated with them that allow for limited Aging in Place.

LIVING WITH FAMILY

There are often situations where caregivers consider the possibility of moving the senior into their home rather than relocating them to a retirement or long-term care home. While it is wonderful to be in a family where this is something one is willing and able to offer to a loved one, many factors and issues should be discussed openly before making this decision. Do take some time to determine the pros and cons of this scenario and the implications for yourself and your family now and in the future, to the best of your ability, before organizing anything. Keep in mind your existing and past relationship with the person and if there were/are conflicts, what they were and how/if they resolved. This will undoubtedly impact your new living situation should they move in. As well, issues such as care, privacy and accessibility are paramount. Speak to all family members that live with you to get their input, as well as other members who are involved with the senior on a regular basis and assist with any care or tasks.

Consideration needs to be given to how this move will impact:

The senior

- How will they handle their new role in your home?
- How will they cope with living with others; perhaps kids with different schedules to theirs, and a decrease in privacy and independence?
- Will they be able to assist with household tasks?
- Do they live close to their friends/other relatives who make up their social network? If not, how will they visit/spend time with them?

Family members living in your home

- What kind of a relationship does each person in the house have with the senior?
- Will the senior interfere in disciplining children or household decision making?
- How demanding is the senior on all family members?
- What are family members willing/able to do to help/assist?

Yourself

- Will it make caregiving more difficult/time consuming if they are always with you?
- How will this impact your work? and How flexible is your job?
- Ensure you are fully aware of their medical situation and needs. Can you give them enough or proper care?
- Can you assist with transportation to, or attending at, medical appointments if necessary?
- If you can't provide enough care in the future what is the alternate plan?
- What might the potential impact on your marriage be? (Does the senior get along well with your spouse and children?)
- What services are available in your community to help you out if you need assistance?
- If there are services, are they affordable and is the senior willing to accept outside help?

- Is your house able to accommodate any assistive devices or special needs? (i.e., are there stairs? how wide are doorways? are there safety hazards that need to be addressed? etc.) If not, are you willing/able to renovate to make it accessible/safe for the senior?
- If there are cognitive issues, are you/your family able to deal with related challenges?

Other family members external to your household

- Are there other family members who can or will help?
- What are they willing to do and how long will they commit to help?
- Are there conflicts with other family members that will be problematic if the senior lives with you and not them?

The relocation of the senior's belongings

- What do you do with what can't fit in your home or what you don't want?
- If they have a pet, are you able to keep it in your home and provide care for it?

Finances

- Can you afford the extra person?
- Will they contribute money to the household?
- If yes, how much and is it enough?
- Will the seniors' financial contribution create a problem with other relatives/siblings?

While intergenerational families living under one roof can prove to be very rewarding and beneficial, there are also times where adding others to your nuclear family home, can be stressful and create new issues and dynamics between people. As with any scenario involving family and emotionally-charged issues like relocation and decreasing independence, there are often several factors at play and often no easy solution that makes everyone equally happy. In order to maximize the chances of a good outcome, one should try to determine the motivation/reason behind why this is something you are thinking of doing (is it because of guilt? expectation? tradition? financial issues? conflict with other family members? other things?), and how each person involved may potentially be impacted both positively and negatively by the amalgamation of households.

For those who may be struggling with this decision, do keep in mind that especially in situations where caregiving is difficult for whatever reason, sometimes allowing others to provide care is the best solution for all involved. Even if the ultimate decision is relocation to a care setting, it should not be seen as a reflection of how you feel about the person or your ability/desire to be a 'care giver' to them.

GOVERNMENT FUNDED HOME AND COMMUNITY CARE SERVICES

Each province has their own model of funded health care services which includes home and community care (consisting of various supportive services/therapists like Speech, Occupational and Physical Therapy, homemaking, personal care, in-home nursing services), hospitals, long-term care and in some provinces, Assisted Living. Providing home support and home health care services is meant to prevent and, in some cases, delay acute or long-term care placement. While in-home support services can be accessed through the private sector through various agencies, across Canada there is also the option of obtaining care and service through a government funded agency. One of two models exist depending on where you reside. Some provinces have contracts with specific agencies to provide service and pay them directly; others have moved to more of a 'self-managed care' approach where users receive funds that they can direct to whichever agency best meets their needs.

ONTARIO LOCAL HEALTH INTEGRATION NETWORKS (LHINs)

The 14 Local Health Integration Networks (LHINs), created by the government of Ontario in 2006, are not-for-profit corporations with the responsibility of planning, integrating, funding and delivering health care services in the province. Each is governed by its own provincially-appointed board of directors. Each LHIN works with health service providers (e.g. hospitals, community health centres, long-term care, support services, mental health and addiction services) within their defined area. While funding for the LHINs comes directly from the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care, the goal and purpose of creating this method of decentralized health care delivery, was to enable each community to assess their needs and decide priorities at a local level. The premise is that each community has unique needs and as a result, those who live, provide services and use services are the best people to understand needs at the community level.

Home and Community Care

The LHINs are responsible for delivering Home and Community Care services in their respective regions. LHINs provide assessment, care coordination, information and referral to a full range of services for children, palliative patients, individuals with complex care needs, those who are transitioning from hospital to home and patients who require in-home services to help them remain in their home.

LHIN Care Coordinators create individual care plans to help patients:

- Maintain independence in their own home
- Avoid hospital admission
- Explore and choose from a wide range of health and social services
- Find the right housing or long-term care home options when living independently is no longer possible

Health care services provided by the LHINs may include: nursing, personal support, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, speech-language therapy, and access to adult day programs, assisted living, falls prevention and group exercise classes. Anyone can make a referral/request for service by calling their local LHIN. If you are an inpatient in a hospital, LHIN staff will transition you safely home or to services within the community. As a first step, individuals are assessed by a Care Coordinator who works with patients, caregivers and your health care team to develop care plans to support your unique and changing needs. The LHIN uses a globally recognized, research-based assessment tool to help deliver the best possible care plan. If living independently is no longer the best option, Care Coordinators work with eligible patients and their families to find the long-term care home that best fits each person's needs. Application for admission into a provincially-regulated long-term care home can only be made through the LHIN, who assess eligibility, have comprehensive listings of available homes for long and short stays, and will help with the application forms.

Whether it's a LHIN home and community care service, or a service that is available in the community, LHINs work with patients to find the care and services they need. LHIN home and community care services are provided at no cost to the patient. Some community services are available, at a fee.

Additionally, certain medical supplies may, in some cases, be partially or fully covered by the program. Telephone numbers for all LHINs in Ontario and the areas each covers are included in the chart on the next page.

To find out further information about your local LHIN, call 310-2222 (area code not required) or visit www.lhins.on.ca⁸.

ALBERTA HEALTH SERVICES (AHS)

While public homecare services are administered through Alberta Health Services to anyone with a valid healthcare card who has needs that can be met at home in a safe manner, there are several Homecare area specific Zone's in the province where one would connect with a Case Manager who can identify needs, create a plan of care and connect clients with services and resources in the community. Homecare can be provided in one's home, a specific clinic setting or in other community settings. To find out more information or request a homecare assessment you may call Health Link at 811 or visit ahs.ca/homecare. Alternately, you can look up your Zone on the chart below and contact the associated number. If you are unsure what Zone you are in, visit www.albertahealthservices.ca/zones/zones.aspx. A RN is on staff at each location and will be able to answer any questions you may have, do an assessment and arrange for any necessary referrals.⁹

BC COMMUNITY CARE

The process for applying for homecare and available services is similar in all provinces. Eligibility is always based on having a valid health card (in BC a Care Card or BC Service Card) and having needs that can safely be met in the community. The primary difference appears to be what each province calls the organizing government agency that does the assessments, creates care plans and makes referrals. Individuals (a potential client, friend or family member) or health care professionals can make a referral to BC Community Care. To apply for and receive home and community care services in British Columbia one would need to go through their local health authority¹⁰. If a needs assessment is deemed appropriate, someone will visit you at home to determine eligibility, service needs, urgency and if any costs would be involved. Some services are income based so in some situations you may need to provide your notice of assessment or tax return. If it is determined that you are eligible for services, a care plan will be developed to meet your needs. If you are found to be ineligible for government funded home care services, your health authority can direct you to other resources that can meet your needs. You may contact HealthLinkBC (www.healthlinkbc.ca) at 811 from your telephone or use the chart on the next page to contact your local health authority to enquire about available services.

SASKATCHEWAN HEALTH AUTHORITY

Home care in Saskatchewan is provided by the provincial health authority. Available services include: assessments, case management, care coordination, nursing, personal care, therapies, volunteer programs and meal service.¹¹ Depending on the service and the client’s income, a cost to the client may be involved though there is the opportunity for people to apply for a subsidy if they cannot afford the service cost. There is no cost if the service is provided by a professional (e.g. RN or Therapist) or a volunteer.¹²

Saskatchewan also has the option of ‘individualized funding’ whereby you would receive money directly to manage your non-professional support services such as personal/home care. The client would then purchase their services directly from an agency of their choice. The amount of funding received is based on ‘assessed need’. For information on individualized funding visit www.saskatchewan.ca/residents/health/accessing-health-care-services/care-at-home-and-outside-the-hospital/individualized-funding-for-home-care. For additional information on home care services available in your area, eligibility and any cost factors, contact the HealthLine (www.healthlineonline.ca) at 811 from your telephone or use the chart on the next page to contact your local health authority¹³.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE (ONTARIO)?

People attempting to determine the type of care they need for themselves or a loved one are often unaware of, or confused by, the difference in terminology with respect to levels of care. The chart below is meant to assist in quickly clarifying the difference, but for greater detail please see the sections related to each topic. Please keep in mind that no decision for placement of any kind can or should be made without the consent and knowledge of the person involved, if they are competent.

LEVEL OF CARE	KEY FEATURES
Independent Seniors' Apartments (Page 6)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Private rental apartment; may have Rent Geared to Income. • May have some Supportive Housing services, meals for purchase, social programs, visiting MD.
Supportive Housing (Page 18)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Independent apartments with a care component. • 24/7 availability of support workers – can assist with meal preparation and homemaking. • Subsidies are available in some buildings.
Retirement Residences (sometimes called Assisted Living, Retirement Homes, Retirement Communities) (Page 19)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Privately owned and operated (some are owned by not-for-profit organizations). • Accommodation is mostly private – rooms, suites or apartments, some have semi-private units. • Services provided usually include: social/recreational activities, housekeeping, most/some/all meals, minimal assistance with personal care (may be a fee involved), 24-hour staff – additional care may have to be purchased. • Licensed and regulated by the Retirement Homes Regulatory Authority (RHRA). • Must abide by the Retirement Homes Act, 2010; the Residential Tenancies Act, Health Protection and Promotion Act, fire and building codes. • Apply directly to the home. • Cost is determined by individual homes based on various factors. • No government subsidies are available.
Long-Term Care Homes (formerly called Nursing Homes) (Page 47)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ownership/operation may be private, not-for profit, municipal or charitable. • Provide 24-hour assistance with personal care, eating, bathing, medications, medical/nursing needs. • Amenities, recreational activities vary; housekeeping, laundry services and meals are included. • Cost of care/support is covered by the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care. • Residents pay room & board portion (called the "co-payment"). • Standardized rates across the province set by the Ontario Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care; subsidies available for those unable to pay ward rate. • May be waiting lists. • Apply through local LHIN – maximum of five choices, first one to come available must be accepted. • Residents must be medically stable but usually require care of some kind; may be cognitively impaired. • All homes are licensed, regulated and funded by the provincial government under the Long-Term Care Homes Act, 2007.
Complex Continuing Care	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Hospital-like facilities. • Patient must have very heavy care needs that cannot be managed in a long-term care home, be medically unstable or have complex issues that require frequent nursing/medical attention. • Usually admitted directly from an acute care hospital.

SUPPORTIVE HOUSING IN ONTARIO

Some seniors' rental apartment buildings offer something called 'supportive housing services'. This means that, if required, minimal to moderate care through personal support (which may include daily visits/check-ins, bathing and dressing, assistance with shopping, meals and transportation) and/or homemaking services is available to residents. There is usually a contract that details the care arrangement between the service provider and the resident (the owner of the unit is usually different from the service provider). Apartments with this option may make it possible for a senior to remain at home independently longer than they would in an apartment without supportive housing services available. In some instances, this type of service is offered in a setting adjacent or connected to another type of care/seniors' home, which allows residents to utilize some of the services or amenities in the adjoining residence.

Personal support and homemaking services coordinated through the LHIN are usually not available to residents of these buildings if those services are available within the building. The ownership, operation, funding base and administration of monies for such structures varies and may come from municipal governments, the LHINs, the Ministry of Housing or a not-for-profit organization such as a church/faith-based organization, seniors' organization or cultural group. As a result, accommodation, care requirements, service providers, building amenities, on-site services such as personal care and homemaking, subsidies and cost factors may differ from one residence to another. Rental costs are based on market rates; however, some may have subsidies available for eligible applicants. There is usually a waiting list for entry into these buildings. The Residential Tenancies Act governs the housing portion of the accommodation. If there is a specific building you are interested in finding out about, contact them directly to inquire about the application process, waiting list for service and amount of care available.

There does not appear to be one all-encompassing list of all supportive housing settings in Ontario but there are several ways to locate something in your community. You may wish to contact your local LHIN, community support agency or local housing authority to ask if they have information about supportive housing complexes or providers in your area. The Ontario Non-Profit Housing Association website (www.onpha.on.ca) contains contact details on region-specific access centres that can provide information or applications for non-profit housing complexes/services in Ontario (click on the box at the bottom of the page titled "Looking for Housing?" on their About non-profit housing page, accessible on the tab for About on the black bar at the top of their home page). AdvantAge Ontario's website (www.advantageontario.ca) contains listings of members of their organization by area, which includes those that offer "Seniors' Housing" (click the box titled "Find a Location" on their home page; find your region on the map of Ontario and click on it. A list of their member homes and agencies will appear below the map for that specific region). A quick search of the internet will reveal several additional websites detailing specific information about social/non-profit housing and supportive housing for seniors throughout the province.

SUPPORTIVE HOUSING IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

BC has a Seniors' Supportive Housing Program available to those low-income seniors who can live independently with some minimal assistance (less care than would be required in an Assisted Living residence). The program operates out of apartment buildings with private units that are part of the subsidized housing program. Units may have modifications to accommodate seniors and those with certain disabilities (e.g. grab bars, showers instead of tubs, easy to use door handles and faucets, etc.). Support services such as some meals, light housekeeping and some laundry services, as well as social and recreational activities and emergency response may be included. The cost is subsidized by BC Housing, so rent is geared to income (set at 50% of gross household income) and applications either go through the Housing Registry if the property is listed with them, or directly to the provider if they are not. As with most subsidized housing, the need far outweighs availability so there will likely be a waiting list for the property you are interested in. It is therefore important to keep your application active by updating it every 6 months until a unit becomes available.¹⁵ For additional information on Senior Supportive Housing in BC visit www.bchousing.org/housing-assistance/housing-with-support/seniors-supportive-housing.

SUPPORTIVE HOUSING IN SASKATCHEWAN

Seniors in Saskatchewan on a limited income who require some support to remain independent may have the option of accessing SALS (Saskatchewan Assisted Living Services) which “provides the coordination of optional community-based services for seniors in select social housing projects”¹⁶. Services may include one meal per day, personal response, laundry, housekeeping and recreation. While there is a cost for the services, because it is geared to those on a limited income, rates are kept at an affordable level through “local coordination, partnerships, and bulk delivery”. Those interested in information on this program, can call 1 (800) 667-7567 or the local housing authority.

WHAT IS A RETIREMENT RESIDENCE (ONTARIO)?

Retirement residences and communities (also called retirement homes) are ideal for older persons in relatively good health who may have minimal or moderate care needs and cannot (or do not want to) be in their own homes. They provide a safe, supervised environment that allows for the opportunity to enjoy organized activities, socialize with people their own age, have their meals prepared and housekeeping done by someone else, and obtain some care if needed. Residents are able to maintain privacy, dignity and independence while having the freedom to choose how much to do for themselves, how much to have done for them and how and with whom to spend their time.

Residents can usually bring some of their own furniture. A few homes even allow small pets (as long as the pet owner can look after them). Several people living in retirement residences still drive their own cars. Most are free to leave during the daytime without supervision. Retirement living residences vary greatly in location, size, accommodation, cost factors, services, amenities and staffing. In general, costs are market-driven and dependent on location, ownership, care needs, amenities and other factors. Residences in rural areas may be less expensive than comparable ones in large urban centres. They are all privately owned and operated. There are over 750 licensed homes¹⁷ in Ontario and many new ones currently under construction.

In June 2010, the provincial government passed the Retirement Homes Act which now governs residences across Ontario. The legislation details mandatory standards for resident care and safety. As well, all homes must continue to abide by the regulations set out in the *Residential Tenancies Act*¹⁸, the Health Protection and Promotion Act (which sets standards that impact a variety of businesses, including retirement residences, related to water quality, sanitation and safe food preparation) and the Ontario Building and Fire Codes.

Retirement residences in Ontario may be for profit or not-for-profit. Rates across the province are not standardized; fees are based on various factors determined by each residence (e.g. location, amenities included, suite size, ownership, size, care level, etc.). Some not-for-profit residences may have available subsidies and are usually owned by a religious, charitable or community organization with management responsible to a central board of directors. There are no government subsidies available for retirement home residents; however, some costs related to care might be tax deductible. The Canada Customs and Revenue Agency (CCRA) allows retirement home & long-term care home residents to make a claim on their annual tax return for the care services they receive as a medical expense provided the required documentation is submitted for qualifying services (for more information visit the link for Attendant care or care in a facility at www.canada.ca/en/revenue-agency/services/tax/individuals/topics/about-your-tax-return/tax-return/completing-a-tax-return/deductions-credits-expenses/lines-330-331-eligible-medical-expenses-you-claim-on-your-tax-return/attendant-care-care-a-facility.html).

Unlike long-term care homes, there are no standard application forms for all residences and no central processing agency. Application to enter a retirement residence is made directly to the residence itself. Prospective residents may be required to undergo a physical assessment (or have a medical form completed) by their physician or medical personnel attached to the residence, prior to moving in, to ensure that the residence can meet their physical and medical needs. Some residences may have waiting lists.

¹⁷ Licensed homes are those who meet the criteria of a retirement home set out in the Retirement Homes Act, 2010 and have applied for and received a licence to operate from the Retirement Homes Regulatory Authority. As of March 31, 2018, there were 753 licensed retirement homes in Ontario.

¹⁸ Retirement residences are included in the definition of Care Homes in the Act.

WHAT IS A RETIREMENT RESIDENCE?

Residents mostly enter a retirement residence while they are still healthy, active, cognitively alert and fairly independent¹⁹. They can look after some or most of their personal care and can usually get to the dining room unassisted. Most retirement residences have health care aides and/or nursing staff available in the event of a medical emergency. Many can provide supervision with medication administration and bathing, if required, although some may charge an extra fee for these services. Meals (usually in a central dining room), housekeeping (and sometimes some laundry services) and in-house recreational programs are generally included in the monthly cost. Accommodation differs from one residence to another and ranges from ward to semi-private to variations of private rooms, suites and/or apartments. Some have suites with some form of a kitchenette to allow for light meal preparation; however, there are often restrictions around using many kinds of electrical appliances in your suite. Depending on the residence, available personal care services may range from minimal assistance to a comprehensive continuum of care. A home that offers varying levels of care may enable residents to continue to be managed in their chosen residence if their health deteriorates and their need for care increases (some residences term this Aging in Place²⁰).

Local Health Integration Networks (LHINs) may coordinate some personal support and/or professional services (e.g. physiotherapy, nursing, etc.) for residents of retirement residences. Provision of service is based on individual assessment of needs by a LHIN Care Coordinator and the services available in the residence. Professional services are usually time-limited and for assessment and training.

While some homes refer to themselves as 'Assisted Living' and include some basic care, others will offer Assisted Living (AL) programs or units (sometimes called Special Care, Enhanced Care, Supportive Care or Personal Care) where more nursing and/or personal care is available for residents who require it currently or in the future. Depending on the home and how they set up their packages and rates, "Assisted Living" may include variations of housekeeping, laundry services, meals, personal care and medication management. In most homes that offer this as an option, there is an extra cost for receiving this kind of care or residing in this type of a unit, and sometimes a waiting list for a separate unit, if there is one.

In many retirement settings, extra personal care can be purchased on an hourly, daily or monthly basis, either through the residence or from an external agency. In some homes, residents may hire private companions or 'shared care' (two residents hire one person who attends to both of them, enabling them to share services, reducing the cost of extra care) if the amount of care included in a resident's monthly fee (or the amount of care the residence can provide) is not enough.

Some residences have secure units or floors for residents with dementia/memory issues who are at risk for wandering. There are also a few residences that specialize in dementia care and are only accessible to those with significant cognitive impairment. Depending on the circumstances and symptoms, someone with dementia may be better suited to a long-term care home. Factors such as safety, behavioral issues, cost and care needs should be considered carefully when making a placement decision for someone with dementia.

Many retirement residences provide short-term respite care for people who are recovering from an illness or to provide relief for a caregiver, vacation care while caregivers are on holiday and trial stays for a few days or weeks, to allow people to try out the residence before making a final decision.

¹⁹ All homes offer independent living with minimal support however, in recent years, many homes also offer care to those who require assisted living and/or dementia care, though not all have secure units (which are necessary for those who may wander).

²⁰ In residences that offer "Aging in Place", costs may increase with care needs. Depending on the residence and the amount and type of care required, increasing care may involve moving within the residence to an Assisted Living or Supportive Care Unit.

SUBSIDIZED ASSISTED LIVING IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Assisted Living in BC is much like retirement living in Ontario. It falls in between living at home and living in a long-term care home for many. In essence, it is for seniors or disabled adults who are fairly independent but require/may benefit from some support. It includes accommodation, meals, housekeeping and laundry services, recreation and may include some personal care services. BC does have some government-funded (through the Independent Living BC program) subsidized units for those on a limited income. Eligibility is determined through the local health authority and if qualified, a senior would pay 70% of their after-tax income and a hydro surcharge. For information on these subsidized residences visit www.bchousing.org/housing-assistance/housing-with-support/assisted-living-residences.

One organ donor can save up to eight lives. Anyone who is healthy and of age to give consent can be an Organ Donor in the province of Ontario. For information or to register as a donor visit www.canada.ca/en/public-health/services/diseases/blood-organ-tissue-donation.html.

RETIREMENT RESIDENCE COST CALCULATOR

Many people think that it is more expensive to live in a retirement residence than it is to live in their current home. While in some cases, this may be true, in others, it may indeed cost less annually than maintaining an existing property. Below is a simple chart that will assist seniors in calculating the difference. An online version of this tool is available at www.senioropolis.com/retirement-calculator.asp.

WHAT IS THE RHRA (ONTARIO)?

The Retirement Homes Regulatory Authority (RHRA) is an independent, not-for-profit organization that oversees retirement homes in Ontario and enforces the Retirement Homes Act, 2010 (the Act). RHRA staff process retirement home license applications, respond to calls about harm to retirement home residents and inspect retirement homes to make sure they meet the standards in the Act. The RHRA is accountable to the government of Ontario through a written agreement called a "Memorandum of Understanding", which is available on the RHRA website (www.rhra.ca).

Public Register - In Ontario all retirement homes that meet the Act's definition of a retirement home must have a license from the RHRA to operate. Retirement homes that have applied for a license, or that have received a license, are listed in the Public Register. The Register can be viewed at www.rhra.ca. The Public Register provides information on the presence of fire sprinklers, lists the services a home offers and includes inspection reports or conditions placed on a home's license, as well as orders issued by the Registrar. The Register also lists license applications that have been refused or licenses that have been revoked, persons operating a retirement home without a license, and prosecutions. Retirement homes must post their license in view of residents.

Reporting Harm - The RHRA responds to information about harm or risk of harm to retirement home residents. These events include abuse, neglect, improper care or treatment, unlawful conduct and misuse of a resident's money. Persons that suspect harm must report it to the RHRA. A toll-free number –1 (855) ASK-RHRA (1 (855) 275-7472) has been set up to receive reports or to respond to questions. Reports of harm or risk of harm may be made anonymously. Reports or allegations of neglect or abuse are followed-up on by RHRA compliance staff and may result in an inspection of the home. Inspection reports are posted on the RHRA Public Register. Residents requiring immediate emergency assistance should call 911.

Complaints about Retirement Homes - Every retirement home is required to have an internal complaints process to help address residents' complaints. In addition to speaking with the home, residents may also file a formal complaint with the RHRA should they believe a retirement home is not following the Act. For information on how to file a complaint, visit the "For Retirement Home Residents" section on www.rhra.ca. You may download the complaint form and submit it with all required information to the RHRA. For more information and/or help completing the form, contact the RHRA at (1 (855) 275-7472).

ASSISTED LIVING & REGULATION IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

British Columbia was the first province in Canada to regulate "Assisted Living Residences", the category under which many retirement residences fall. Assisted Living in British Columbia is regulated by the Community Care and Assisted Living Act, Assisted Living Regulation and Community Care and Assisted Living Regulation. All operators of Assisted Living must comply with these three pieces of legislation. The Community Care and Assisted Living Act is the governing legislation and details & defines the standards for health and safety of residents in licensed homes. The regulations dictate license application procedures, policies, health and safety provisions, staffing and management requirements. Many types of residences and facilities are governed by this legislation ranging from group homes for those with disabilities or mental illness to residential care homes housing 3 or more unrelated people regardless of the funding body or profit status of the home. Assisted Living units can be for profit or not-for-profit and vary in size and accommodation.

In order to be considered an Assisted Living Residence, residents must require assistance with their activities of daily living in one or two areas (more than two falls into the realm of long-term/residential care). Examples include: assistance with personal hygiene, dressing, eating, walking, medications, financial management etc. Residences that meet these criteria – both publicly subsidized and private pay – must be registered with and follow regulations set out by the Assisted Living Registrar. The mandate of the Registrar as indicated in the governing legislation is to “protect the health and safety of assisted living residents”.²⁴ This is accomplished through registering all qualifying residences, creating and upholding standards for health and safety (including staffing, safety, personal care services and emergency preparedness), investigating complaints and inspecting residences as deemed necessary. For additional information on the Assisted Living Registry and/or associated legislation visit <https://www2.gov.bc.ca/gov/content/health/accessing-health-care/assisted-living-registrar>.

WHAT IS THE BCSLA?

The British Columbia Seniors Living Association began in 2003 (originally called the British Columbia Retirement Communities Association) as a voluntary organization of 10 owners/operators of private retirement communities who wanted to ensure that there was adequate representation of the industry in BC. Over the last 15 years the membership has grown to 159 (independent and assisted living) retirement communities and 114 suppliers of goods and services to the industry.²⁵ The BCSLA's role in the BC retirement living industry is multi-faceted and includes leadership, advocacy for its members and education of consumers, members and stakeholders. SUPPORTIVE LIVING & REGULATION IN ALBERTA

Alberta is one of the provinces in Canada that has legislation to protect seniors who reside in retirement-type settings which are grouped under the category of ‘Supportive Living Facilities’. Accommodation standards have been in place since 2007 and are maintained and enforced through Alberta Health Services. Alberta has both public and private supportive living settings which are impacted by these standards.

What is the definition of Supportive Living in Alberta? - Supportive living is a housing/residential setting that encourages and supports independence with the provision of accommodation, care & support as required. While many residences under this definition are specifically for seniors, supportive living as a licenced level of care is broad enough to extend beyond seniors; younger people who have a mental or physical disability and require some support can also reside in a supportive living residence (which may be a group home or a designated supportive living²⁶ setting that is not a seniors’ home) that is governed by the same legislation. Usually the environment also contains amenities that offer safety and security while meeting the needs of the residents. There are limits to this kind of care; facilities providing services for those with complex needs fall into a different category and as such under different regulations. Generally, supportive living residences offer “health and wellness” as well as “hospitality” services which encompass things such as meals, housekeeping, laundry, social and recreational services, etc. For further details on what Supportive Living entails you can visit www.health.alberta.ca/services/supportive-living-guide.html.

The Supportive Living Accommodation Licensing Act governs all settings with 4 or more permanent residents who receive “services related to safety and security [at least once a day]...and...at least one meal a day or housekeeping services”. In addition to the provincial standards set out under this legislation (which cover things like meal provision, housekeeping, maintenance, safety and security), residences are also expected to follow several other regulations administered by their municipalities as well as other applicable provincial and federal standards related to the health and safety of their residents and proper business practices of themselves and those they employ. The provincial government sets the standards for supportive living residences, monitors compliance and does annual inspections of licenced homes.²⁷ For information on complaints and compliance with standards of supportive living residences in Alberta visit <http://standardsandlicensing.alberta.ca/>. For further information on standards governing all supportive living in the province and what they encompass you can visit www.health.alberta.ca/services/continuing-care-forms.html.

As with retirement settings in Ontario, in Alberta each residence determines who is eligible, what accommodations and services/service packages they wish to offer, and the related costs for both. The Home Care Program administered by Alberta Health Services does provide some health and personal care services for residents of many supportive living homes. And, while many senior-specific residences are private pay, for those with a low/moderate income, there is provincial legislation that governs 'Seniors Lodges'²⁸ which caps the maximum accommodation fee they can be charged so that they have money left for personal expenses; they are entitled to a minimum of $315.00/month for incidentals from their monthly income/pension. There are also "affordable supportive living spaces that were funded in part with capital grant dollars from the province", and as such, cannot charge a resident more than what it costs for a private room in a provincial long-term care home. For information on the costs in a designated supportive living setting, visit www.health.alberta.ca/services/continuing-care-accommodation-charges.html.

WHAT IS THE ASCHA?

The Alberta Seniors Communities and Housing Association (ASCHA) is a not-for-profit organization that represents and advocates for Alberta's senior housing owners and operators. Membership includes independent and supportive living properties and represents "almost 70% of the seniors housing sector in Alberta".²⁹ Members are part of the voluntary, public and private sector as well as various stakeholders in the industry. In their role as a resource for Alberta's senior housing industry they assist members as well as consumers in ensuring a positive quality of life for the seniors they serve. Consumers are welcome to visit their free online Alberta Seniors Housing Directory at <https://housingdirectory.ascha.com/> where you can search for housing by various criteria including location, organization, and support services, etc.

PERSONAL CARE HOMES IN SASKATCHEWAN

Personal Care Homes in Saskatchewan are much like Retirement Homes in other provinces. They are privately owned businesses but require a license and follow regulations set out in The Personal Care Homes Act. They provide accommodation, meals, personal care supervision, assistance or support and are generally for people who have light care needs; however, there are some settings that can manage those who require heavier care. The provincial Ministry of Health is responsible for licensing, monitoring, inspecting and ensuring compliance with legislation. As well, the Ministry maintains a publicly accessible database of Personal Care Homes, their contact information, costs and inspection records at <http://personalcarehomes.saskatchewan.ca/>.

As with other provinces, homes are both for profit and not-for-profit. There is no minimum or maximum number of beds a licenced home can have. Many homes are small with only a handful of residents while there are others that are corporately owned by large companies with many residents. Admission criteria and monthly cost varies and is determined by the owner/operator based on services, care available and other factors.

Seniors with a low income can apply for the Personal Care Home Benefit (PCHB) to supplement the cost of living in a Personal Care Home. Eligibility is based on marital status and monthly income. "This benefit supplements the

RETIREMENT RESIDENCE VISITING TIPS

Choosing a retirement residence³¹ for yourself or a loved one is an important decision that should not be made hastily. If you are assisting someone in this process, before beginning your search you must know and understand their needs, both in terms of services required and the type of setting they would feel most at home in. In addition, since affordability is a key area of concern for many, you should determine available financial resources and a monthly budget prior to viewing residences. Keep in mind that beyond the posted room rate, there may be extra costs involved (care, cable, telephone, etc.) that should be factored into your calculations. If you have the luxury of time, take that time to research your options carefully. Discuss and take note of things of importance to the person moving – activities they like, external resources that should be nearby, important safety & care features you would like them to have, on-site amenities that are preferred/desired, etc. Conduct a preliminary search of residences either online or by using Part 3 of this Guide and choose a few places that you think will meet your/their needs and are within your – or your loved one's – budget. It is of utmost importance that the person making the move visits these homes before making a final decision. You may want to visit more than once, perhaps at different times of day. It is advisable to go for lunch or dinner and try the food (never underestimate the importance of liking the food). You may even wish to ask if you could spend a few hours or a day there to participate in some of the recreational programs, observe the interaction between staff and residents and the day-to-day activity. Beyond the walls, amenities and décor, every home has a unique environment, and it is only by spending an extended period in a setting that you can get a sense of whether you would feel comfortable living there.

When you go on visits or tours, you may want to go a bit early, so you can survey the neighbourhood and look around the grounds and lobby area. It is advisable to call ahead to make an appointment, rather than just showing up. This ensures that the Marketing Manager or Administrator is available and can give you the necessary time to tour and ask questions. Whether you go in person or call to make an appointment, be sure to ask for an information package that you can look over before your scheduled visit. You should visit at least three residences. Make sure you take along a list of questions to each one.

When constructing your list, be sure to note which things are mandatory (needs) and which things you would like but may be willing to compromise (desires). Go into each home with an open mind. Take notes during your visits and if the homes will allow it, take a few photos to remind you of significant aspects of each location when you review your notes and impressions later. If you are looking for a home for yourself, you may want to take along a trusted friend or relative so that you can get a second opinion and have someone to discuss your options with.

Many people, in the early stages of a visit to a residence, get a 'gut feeling' as to whether it is the right place for them or their loved one. However, it is still important to research each home carefully. While décor and physical environment are important, there are many other factors to investigate and consider before making a final decision. In addition to the objective questions we ask participating homes (the answers to which are in the Part 3 of this Guide), there are many things to look for and ask about when touring a retirement community. It is best to start by using your physical senses which will assist you in determining one of the most important things about any residence: quality of care. The greatest predictor of quality in any setting is the staff. A caring staff and a clean and welcoming environment are key factors that will impact your comfort with a home and can be ascertained easily, if you observe closely and listen carefully during your visit. Take the time to watch the interactions of staff with residents, talk with residents, try the food and observe the environment of each place you visit.

On the next few pages you will find a questionnaire (many questions and the way they are organized, are based on the concept of 'using your senses') which you can copy and use on your visits (or use as a guide to create your own questionnaire). While our list of questions is extensive, you may find that some are not relevant to you or your situation. So as not to overwhelm yourself or others in your group, it is advisable to review the questions below in advance of your visit and highlight those that seem most important for you to have answers to during your preliminary tour. If the first visit goes well, you can always return or call your contact at the residence to ask additional questions another time. Take a fresh questionnaire (and your list of needs vs. desires) to each residence you visit and some extra note paper where you can jot down general impressions and extra information.

153c. Who goes with them?
153d. Is there a cost?
154. Is there a Falls Prevention Program?
155. Does the home have an Assisted Living Area?
156. Does the home have a secure Dementia Area? ³³
157a. What are the criteria for admission to the Assisted Living/Dementia Area?
157b. Is there an extra cost involved?
158. What and how much extra care do they provide on the Assisted Living/Dementia Area?
159a. Can they manage different kinds of dementia?
159b. Is there anything they cannot manage in the spectrum of cognitive impairment illnesses?
160. How do staff deal with difficult behaviours/aggression etc.?
161. How do they keep residents with dementia oriented so they can find their rooms, dining room, etc.?

³³ At one time, only long-term care homes could accommodate the special needs of those with memory issues. In the last few years though, more and more retirement homes have begun to cater to the needs of the memory impaired population. It seems too, that increasingly people are reaching out to the private sector to provide this sort of care. While there are many with mild dementia who can manage without a problem in a retirement home or assisted living setting, there are others who do require a more specialized kind of care especially if behavioural or wandering issues are occurring. If you are in the position of looking for a home for someone with dementia, please see questions 156 - 167.

RETIREMENT RESIDENCE VISITING TIPS

162.	What kind of security is available to prevent residents with dementia from wandering off the unit and out of the residence?

165a.	Are staff trained to manage and communicate with people with dementia?
165b.	How are they trained?
166.	Is the staff to resident ratio different on the dementia floor?
167.	Are there special activities offered to residents with memory issues?
168.	If you/your loved one requires special equipment, programs or staff training, is this residence able to provide it?
169.	Is there a policy on assistive devices such as wheelchairs and scooters? (Some homes may not allow scooters inside the building).
170.	Are there situations where a resident would not be allowed to return after a hospitalization?
171a.	What happens if a resident's health declines (physically and/or mentally)?
171b.	Do they help the person find an alternative living arrangement, if required?
171c.	Do they allow the person to stay while looking for a new home?
171d.	What if the person cannot afford to pay for extra care while they are waiting for alternate placement?
172.	What are the procedures around an illness outbreak?
COST FACTORS
173.	What is included in the monthly cost? (Ask about meals, housekeeping, laundry, activities, personal care and utilities.)

174a. How is rent paid (cheques, pre-authorized payments, etc.)?
174b. How often is rent paid?
175. Are residents required to have insurance on their units?
176a. Does the home label resident clothing?
176b. If they do, do they charge extra?
177a. If laundry service is included, are residents' clothes laundered individually?
177b. If not, who ensures that the correct clothes are given to their rightful owners?
178a. Are there laundry machines so that residents can do their own laundry?
178b. Is there a cost?
179a. What is the cost of extra care if you/ your loved one should require it at a later date?
179b. Is there a limit to how much extra care the residence can/will provide?
180. Can you hire your own caregivers privately from an agency of your choice? (By law, the answer to this should always be "yes".)
181a. Does the local LHIN/Health Authority/ publicly funded home health care agency, service residents in this residence?
181b. If yes, what support/services do they provide?
181c. Is there a time limit for service?
182a. Are there extra/unpublished costs?
182b. What are they?
183a. When was the last extra care fee increase?
183b. How much was it?
184a. How often is rent increased?

RETIREMENT RESIDENCE VISITING TIPS

184b. By how much (i.e. is there a set percentage)? (By Ontario law, rent can be increased annually – 90 days' notice of a rental increase is required – and the maximum allowable rent increase for 2019 without making an application to Landlord and Tenant Board is 1.8% .)
185a. Is there a rate reduction (for food and/or care costs) offered if a resident is away from the residence for an extended time? (i.e. if in hospital or on a vacation)?
185b. How long do you have to be away to receive a reduction?
185c. How much is the reduction per day?
186. How much notice is required for residents who decide to leave?
187. Is there a financial penalty if a resident does not give the necessary notice?
188. If a resident prepares one or more of their own meals per day and eats in their room, is there a rate reduction offered?
189. Are there optional meal packages available?
190. Is there a resident trust account?
STAFFING
191a. What is the ratio of staff to residents?
191b. Does the staff/resident ratio differ between the daytime, nighttime and weekends?
192. What training does the staff have? (Both from the home and via certification.)
193. Is there nursing staff (RN or RPN) on-site or available 24-hours/day?
194a. If language is an issue, are there staff that speak your (or your loved one's) language?
194b. If there are residents who do not speak English (and no staff on duty who

	speak the language of a resident), how does the staff communicate with them?
195.	Are staff members & volunteers required to have vulnerable sector screening and reference checks prior to being hired?
196.	How do the different staff shifts communicate vital resident information to each other?
197.	Is management staff on site seven days/week?
198.	Which hours do management staff work?
199.	Do the same staff work with the same residents when they are on duty?

MISCELLANEOUS/GENERAL IMPRESSIONS COMMENTS

200.	Does the environment seem like a “community”?
201.	During your tour, how did your guide interact with you/the senior? Did they only speak to the family members or did they direct information to the senior?
202.	Were staff members able to answer all your questions?
203.	Did you feel pressured to reserve a room?
204.	Do residents seem to be well cared for (e.g. properly dressed, groomed & clean)?
205.	Do residents appear happy?
206.	Are there residents that appear to be in your/your loved one’s age range?
207.	Are there commonalities that you or your loved one share with other residents (i.e. languages, activities, culture, etc.)?
208.	Do the recreation facilities and/or programs meet your/your relative’s needs?

209. In general, is this the type of place you/your relative would feel comfortable in?
210. Will it meet your/your loved one's needs at an affordable price?

Ask for copies of newsletters and recreation schedules/social calendar that you can take home and review.

Once you have seen all the places you are interested in, you may want to review your original wish list and modify it based on your visits, your current needs and desires and any issues — financial or other — that may have arisen during your search. With new thoughts or questions in mind, you may want to go back for another visit or two to the places you are most interested in, before making a final decision.

Some people will book a short trial stay before committing to a residence. If you do this, it may be wise to stay over a weekend because you may find the residence has a different atmosphere (with respect to staffing, environment and activities) that you may or may not like on those days. Be sure to pay special attention to how you feel while you are there: How do staff members respond to you and your requests? How do they interact with other residents? What are the other residents like? (Are they welcoming? Are you introduced to people? Do you have things in common with them?) Which activities and programs are available? What are the meals like (portion size, taste, variety, etc.)? If a trial stay is not possible, you may want to find out if you can arrange to spend a few hours at the residence where you can participate in activities, try the food and meet other residents.

Before deciding, discuss your impressions with a close friend or family member. Additionally, you may want to have a trusted friend, family member or lawyer review the Tenancy Agreement before you sign it.

RETIREMENT HOMES ACT, 2010 (ONTARIO)

Retirement homes are regulated and must follow legislation called the Retirement Homes Act, 2010 (the Act). The Act provides protections for retirement home residents, so they can live with dignity and make choices about their care. The Act is enforced by the Retirement Homes Regulatory Authority (RHRA).

Under the Act, the RHRA is responsible for:

- Informing the public and educating the retirement home sector and residents about the Act, regulations and role of the RHRA
- Licensing retirement homes and maintaining a Public Register (available at www.rhra.ca)
- Inspecting retirement homes, overseeing compliance and enforcing the Act for the protection of residents

Among other consumer protection measures, the Act sets out a Residents' Bill of Rights. These may be enforced by a resident against a licensee. Operators must post these rights in the home and ensure staff members receive training about them.

The Residents' Bill of Rights includes:

1. The right to:
 - know what care services are provided and how much they cost
 - be informed before fees for a care service(s) are increased
 - receive notice before a care service(s) is discontinued
2. The right to apply for publicly funded care services and assessments
3. The right to be informed about and apply for care services and assessments from an external care provider (i.e. not by the home)

4. The right to have choice of care services provided by qualified and trained staff
5. The right to:
 - participate fully in making care decisions
 - participate fully in the plan of care (e.g. development, revision and review)
 - give or refuse informed consent to any treatment, care or service where consent is required by law
6. The right not to be restrained except in keeping with the common law (i.e. permitted if risk of serious bodily harm to self or others)
7. The right to privacy during treatment and care
8. The right to live in a safe and clean environment with dignity and respect
9. The right to have lifestyle choices respected
10. The right to raise concerns or recommend changes in policies and services without fear of coercion, discrimination or reprisal
11. The right to know if the home is also a care home within the meaning of the Residential Tenancies Act, 2006, and whether the residents therefore have rights and responsibilities as tenants under that Act

The Act does not regulate what retirement homes charge residents for or how much they charge, but residents do have the right to:

- know what care services are provided in the home and how much they cost; and
- be informed in advance of any increases in charges for care services provided in the home.

Retirement homes are also required to provide residents with an information package which must include a list of care services provided in the home and their price.

You can read the Retirement Homes Act, 2010 at www.ontario.ca/laws. Visit www.rhra.ca or call 1 (855) ASK-RHRA (275-7472), for more information about the RHRA³⁴.

THE RESIDENTIAL TENANCIES ACT (RTA) IN ONTARIO

Retirement Residences fall under the definition of “care homes” in the Residential Tenancies Act, 2006. Most of the same rules that apply to rental units also apply to care homes, but there are some additional rules that are specific to this type of housing³⁵. A care home is defined as “a residential building where people live so that they can receive ‘care services’”. Care services include things like nursing care, medication supervision and assistance with activities of daily living (for example: bathing, dressing, etc.). Excluded from the Act are long-term care homes, hospitals, short-term respite and rehabilitation facilities.

Prior to the signing of a Tenancy Agreement, all care homes must give the tenant a Care Home Information Package which must contain information required by the Act, including content relating to:

- types of accommodation
- care services
- meal packages

- staffing levels and qualifications
- the emergency response system
- a list of services and associated costs
- any internal procedures for dealing with resident complaints, including rights of appeal

A written Tenancy Agreement between landlord and tenant (resident) must list the details of the care services and meals to be provided, as well as cost factors involved. It must also state that “the tenant has the right to consult” with a third party and can cancel the agreement in writing within five days of signing it.

Other highlights of the Act specifically for care homes include:

- The landlord must give at least 90 days’ written notice of rent increases.
- Rent can only be increased once in a 12-month period.
- Rent and care services are two different things: care services can be increased at any time, by any amount; but the landlord must give at least 90 days’ notice of a rate increase.
- If the agreement requires the landlord to do so, he may enter the unit at regular intervals to check the condition of the tenant. Permission can be revoked with written notice to the landlord from the tenant.
- A tenant can hire whomever he/she wants to provide extra care services.
- If an agreement relating to a care home is not in writing or does not detail what has been agreed to with respect to care services and meals, the tenant can apply to the Board for an abatement of rent.
- A tenant may terminate the tenancy anytime by giving a minimum of 30 days’ written notice to the landlord. However, if the landlord wishes to terminate the tenancy, he/she must give the tenant 60 days’ notice.
- The landlord may terminate the tenancy if the unit was occupied solely for the purpose of receiving rehabilitative or therapeutic services agreed upon for a fixed length of time.
- A landlord, who gives notice of termination because of the intended demolition or conversion of the unit or for repairs must “make reasonable efforts to find alternative accommodation” for the tenant.
- The landlord may apply to transfer the tenant if he “no longer requires the level of care the landlord provides... or requires a level of care that the landlord...is not able to provide”. However, “appropriate alternate accommodation” must be available.

Important regulations that apply to all residential rental units include:

- The resolution of disputes is handled by the Landlord and Tenant Board.
- Rent increases are governed by Rent Increase Guidelines which is set each year by the Ontario Government – for 2019 the maximum a landlord can increase rent is 1.8%, unless he applies to the Board for a rental increase above the Guideline amount. The increase may be requested to cover increased taxes, charges or utility bills, major renovations or repairs, or the addition of security services to a maximum of 3% above the Guideline amount per year.
- A landlord cannot charge more than one month’s rent (or if rent is paid weekly, not more than one week’s rent) in advance as a security deposit and must pay the tenant the interest on the deposit (which is the same as the Rent Increase Guideline for Ontario) annually.
- Landlords and tenants may also agree to add parking fees and other services such as cable, lockers, etc., to the rent without applying to the Board.

The tenant may apply for a rent reduction if the landlord:

- does not make agreed to repairs or improvements contained in the lease

- does not provide a previously agreed upon service e.g. maintenance
- experiences a decrease in taxes and charges
- reduces or removes a service

A landlord cannot interfere with the reasonable supply of vital services such as heat, natural gas or water.

A prospective tenant should carefully review the Tenancy Agreement, especially with respect to requirements for pre-admission and medical reports, signing out procedures, rules for motorized equipment, smoking, overnight guests and electrical appliances. It is important to keep in mind that a landlord cannot create arbitrary rules that conflict with tenancy rights under the Residential Tenancies Act³⁶.

DID YOU KNOW?

The province of Ontario, recognizing that by 2036 will be home to over 4 million seniors, has created an Action Plan for Seniors to keep seniors healthy, safe and secure. To read or download the document go to <https://www.ontario.ca/page/ontarios-action-plan-seniors>.

RESIDENTIAL TENANCIES LEGISLATION IN OTHER PROVINCES

There is also a Residential Tenancies Act in Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia. Each Act details information on the rights and responsibilities of landlord and tenants as well as how to resolve issues between the two if they are unable to do so on their own. For Landlord Tenant information in each province you may visit the following websites: In Saskatchewan, www.saskatchewan.ca/government/government-structure/boards-commissions-and-agencies/office-of-residential-tenancies (or call 1 (888) 215-2222); in Alberta, www.servicealberta.ca/RTA-handbook-and-quick-reference-guide.cfm or servicealberta.gov.ab.ca/landlord-tenant-disputes.cfm (or call (780) 644-3000) and; in British Columbia, <http://tenants.bc.ca/Residential-Tenancy-Branch/> (or call 1 (800) 665-1185).

LONG-TERM CARE (LTC) IN CANADA

Long-Term Care across Canada varies in terms of terminology and cost factors though the care offered and amenities available is fairly consistent across the country. Long-term care is regulated & monthly rates are determined by each province's Ministry of Health. Every province determines what their rates are, when they are increased and by how much, what the monthly comfort allowance³⁷ is and what subsidies are available for those below the income level of minimum accommodation rates. Below is information divided by province on long-term care and cost factors for the provinces detailed in this edition. For other provinces not listed please visit the website for your provincial ministry of health and search the site for information on long-term care.

WHAT IS LONG-TERM CARE (LTC) IN ONTARIO?

If your care needs can no longer be met in the community or retirement home level does not appear to provide adequate care, you/your loved one may require a long-term care home. Long-term care homes (formerly called Nursing Homes) are licensed, regulated and funded by the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care (MOHLTC). Eligibility for placement in long-term care is determined by your Local Health Integration Network (LHIN). Long-term care homes provide 24-hour/day supervision and/or assistance with personal care, eating, bathing, medications, and medical/nursing needs for medically stable individuals in a secure, supervised environment. They tend to offer more care than is usually available in a seniors' building, retirement residence and even most assisted living settings and can manage special needs such as dementia. Standard room furnishings are provided, as are linens, meals, laundry services, hygiene and medical supplies. Availability of private, semi-private or basic accommodation varies from home to home and depends on when the home was built and renovated.

³⁷ The Comfort allowance is the minimal monthly amount for incidentals a person must be left with after long-term care fees are paid.

Long-term care homes have a dining room, lounge/common areas and activities/programs for residents. There is a doctor available for residents with regular on-site office hours. The government pays the "care portion" of the cost directly to the home. The resident is responsible for the co-payment which covers room and board costs. The "co-payment" amount is standardized across the province and set by the government (MOHLTC).³⁸

A co-payment reduction may be available for individuals who have chosen basic accommodation. If you wish to apply for a rate reduction, the LHIN will provide you with the Rate Reduction package most suitable to your circumstances. The package contains detailed instructions on the required list of documents and completion of the application, as well as phone numbers for assistance (note: eligibility is based on annual income, not personal assets).

If both spouses are receiving OAS, an application for Involuntary Separation can be made through the Income Securities Program of Human Resources Development Canada, which would effectively give each of them the benefit of receiving pensions – including Old Age Security (OAS), Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS) & Guaranteed Annual Income System (GAINS) as if they were single individuals.

All nursing home applications are submitted to and through your Local Health Integration Network. There is no application fee. You must be over 18, have a valid Ontario Health Card and have care needs (eligibility criteria is set by the Ministry) that can be met in a long-term care home to be eligible for placement in one³⁹. Most long-term care homes have waiting lists and you may have to wait for an available bed in your chosen residence(s), depending on bed availability, length of waiting list, level of care required and other factors.

You can choose up to five long-term care homes. If you turn down a bed offer from one of your chosen homes, all your applications will be withdrawn and your application for placement will be closed for 3 months. Should your circumstances or situation change within that 3-month period, you will need to contact your LHIN Care Coordinator for reassessment. It is highly recommended that you take the time to research and visit the homes that you are considering. Once you choose the homes you want to see, call the long-term care homes to schedule a tour. Virtual tours of long-term care homes in your region may be available on the websites of homes you are interested in and/or on your LHIN's website (visit www.lhins.on.ca, select your region, the tab 'Home and Community Care' on their homepage, the tab 'Getting Care' and then, Long-Term Care from the drop-down menu).

For those who do not require permanent accommodation in a long-term care home, short stay respite and convalescent care is available. Application for any of these programs is managed by the LHIN. Short stay respite is designed to provide relief for caregivers. The maximum length of stay is 60 days at a time, up to a total of 90 days in a calendar year. Short stay convalescent care provides supportive and restorative services for people who are recovering ³⁸As of July 1, 2018, the monthly room rate for residents in Ontario long-term care homes are as follows: Basic (depending on when a home was built or renovated this can mean up to 4 residents in a room, in newer homes it is usually 2 people per room) – $60.78/day ($1,848.73/month). Semi-private (usually 2 people per room) - $69.11/day ($2,102.10/month) in an older bed or in a newer bed if admitted prior to July 1, 2012; $70.14/day ($2,133.43/month) if resident was admitted to a newer bed on or after July 1, 2012 but before July 1, 2013; $71.19/day ($2,165.36/month) in a newer bed if admitted July 1, 2013 but before September 1, 2014; $72.23/day ($2,197.00/month) if admitted to a newer bed on or after September 1, 2014 but before July 1, 2015; $73.27/day ($2,228.63/month) if admitted to a newer bed on or after July 1, 2015. Private (one person per room) - $79.52/day ($2,418.74) in an older bed or if admitted before July 1, 2012; $81.35/day ($2,474.40/month) if resident was admitted to a newer bed on or after July 1, 2012 but before July 1, 2013; $83.17/day ($2,529.76/month) in a newer bed if admitted July 1, 2013 but before September 1, 2014; $85.00/day ($2,585.42/month) if admitted to a newer bed on or after September 1, 2014 but before July 1, 2015; $86.82/day ($2,640.78/month) if admitted to a newer bed on or after July 1, 2015. Short Stay Rate – (for Respite/Caregiver Relief: the maximum is 60 continuous days or 90 accumulated days in a calendar year; for Convalescent Care the maximum stay is 90 days in a calendar year) - $39.34/day. Note: fees are increased periodically so please check with your local LHIN for up-to-date rates. These fees do not include optional services like cable, phone, transportation and hairstylist visits. Please see section 245 of the Long-Term Care Homes Act for 'non-allowable resident charges'.

³⁹ If you are looking at placement for a couple who may require different levels of care, it may be best to look at residences which will accommodate both or are connected to alternate homes offering different levels of care. Even if both people are currently at the same level, you may want to explore residences that would continue to manage both, if one's health declines before the others'.

from an illness or injury in hospital or in the community. The maximum length of stay is up to a total of 90 days in a calendar year.

The Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care conducts inspections of long-term care homes and creates reports that are posted on site of the home. For detailed information (and any noted concerns by inspectors) visit the webpage entitled Public Reporting on Long-Term Care Homes at: http://publicreporting.ltchomes.net/en-ca/Search_Selection.aspx. To report any concerns about specific long-term care homes, you can call the Long-Term Care ACTION Line at 1 (866) 434-0144⁴⁰. WHAT IS THE ONTARIO LONG TERM CARE ASSOCIATION?

The Ontario Long Term Care Association (OLTCA) is the largest association of long-term care providers in Canada and the only association that represents the full mix of long-term care operators — private, not-for-profit, charitable, and municipal. The Association represents nearly 70% of Ontario's 630 long-term care homes, located in communities across the province. Its members provide care and accommodation services to more than 70,000 residents annually.

The Association works to promote safe, quality long-term care to Ontario's seniors. It strives to lead the sector in innovation and quality care and services and build excellence in long-term care through leadership, analysis, advocacy and member services. Over the course of its history, the Ontario Long Term Care Association has developed a strong tradition of using a solutions-oriented approach to advance the delivery of the care and services to meet the changing needs of Ontario's long-term care residents. Its vision is a high performing, progressive sector and workplace environment, which delivers safe quality care, and supports a quality of life that engages abilities, respects humanity, and promotes comfort. LONG-TERM CARE IN ALBERTA

Long-Term Care in Alberta (nursing homes) is governed by the provincial government. Long-term care residences provide care for those who have complex health needs that deem them unable to live at home or in a Supportive Living facility. As in other provinces, long-term care homes provide 24-hour on-site care and are staffed by Registered Nurses. All long-term care operators are required to meet Long-Term Care Accommodation Standards (April 2010) in the areas of their physical environment, hospitality services, safety services, personal services, coordination and referral services, residential services, human resources and management and administration⁴². In all there are 30 standards. Additionally, long-term care homes must also comply with the *Continuing Care Health Services Standards*⁴³.

Long-term care and designated supportive living 'accommodation' fees are set by the government annually. As of July 1, 2018, the cost is as follows: Private room - $66.95/day; semi-private - $57.90/month; standard - $55.00/day. Subsidies may be available based on an individual's income. Those wishing to have their care needs assessed &/or to find out if they are eligible to move into a long-term care facility can contact Alberta Health Services. For information on accessing Continuing Care in Alberta visit www.albertahealthservices.ca/cc/Page15328.aspx.

ALBERTA CONTINUING CARE ASSOCIATION

The Alberta Continuing Care Association (ACCA) was established in 1981 as voluntary organization which serves as a voice for members who currently provide care and services to 8,600 long-term care residents and 5,000 designated supportive living residents. Members are in both the private and not-for-profit owners and operators that provide care and services as well as other businesses who provide goods and services to the sector. The ACCA conveys issues to stakeholders on behalf of their members, collaborates with other organizations and works to support and ensure “quality of care and quality of life for all Albertans.”⁴⁴ For additional information on this organization visit www.ab-cca.ca or call (780) 435-0699.

LONG-TERM RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Long-Term Residential Care Homes (also called, nursing homes, long-term care or extended care) are facilities for those that have complex care needs requiring 24/7 care and support who cannot be cared for in their own homes or in an assisted living residence. Residents are provided with meals, medication assistance, assistance with activities of daily living and social/recreational programs. The governing legislation that sets out standards for ‘health and safety, building requirements, food service, administering medications and resident care’, is *The Community Care and Assisted Living Act (Residential Care Regulation)*⁴⁵. Available facilities range from smaller group home type settings to large stand-alone structures or those that are part of larger Campus’ of Care. Some will offer a short-term stay option for convalescent care, respite or palliation. Eligibility for a government subsidized Residential Care facility is determined by your Regional Health Authority. Those assessed as having the greatest need will be given priority for admission to the first available and appropriate bed. Once a bed offer is made, the potential resident must move into the residence within 48 hours.

Health Authorities are responsible for investigating complaints and inspecting long-term residential care homes to ensure they meet the standards set by the government.

Fees for publicly-funded homes are determined by the person’s after-tax income based on a specific formula. There are also private-pay residential care homes where no subsidies are available. The private homes set their own fees and manage their own waiting lists and admission procedures⁴⁶.

As of January 1, 2018⁴⁷, the cost of care (client rate) in a publicly-funded residential care home in BC is based on the following:

1. Annual income less than $19,500.00 = minimum cost is $1,130.60/month⁴⁸
2. Minimum client rate for spouses who share a room in a residential care home and both receive GIS (married rate) = $783.50/month/each
3. Maximum rate for those who have a higher income = $3,278.80/month⁴⁹
4. In addition, there will be some charges not included in the co-payment rate. Ask the homes you are interested in applying to for the list of supplies and items you will be responsible to pay for.

It is difficult to locate sources for details of the costs in private-pay residential care homes however, we were able to find one based on 2017 reported rates. The median rate for BC for room, board and basic care in a private room in 2017 was $6,000.00/month. The range was from $2,275.00/month to $9,900.00/month depending on the location and other factors⁵⁰.

⁴⁸ The comfort allowance is set at $325.00/month so the minimum rate is meant to ensure that most people have at least that amount left for incidentals after paying the cost of room and board in a residential care home.

⁴⁹ Note: rates are subject to change and should be verified with your local Health Authority.

BC CARE PROVIDERS ASSOCIATION

The BC Care Providers Association (BCCPA) encompasses providers in the whole continuing care sector including residential care and assisted living as well as home care. Member organizations provide service to over 27,000 seniors through both in home care and residential settings. They focus on advocacy, promoting quality of care and partnering with key stakeholders to achieve and maintain their vision to deliver “effective leadership and valued resources that support progressive change, promoting the growth and success of its members who provide the best possible care services for seniors”⁵¹. SPECIAL-CARE HOMES IN SASKATCHEWAN

In Saskatchewan, publicly-funded long-term care is provided in Special-care Homes. As with other provincial nursing homes, admission to a home is for those whose care needs can no longer be met in the community or whose care needs are too great for a retirement/assisted living setting. Special-care Homes are either run by the Saskatchewan Health Authority or by an alternate provider who is contracted by the Health Authority. The legislative authority governing long-term care is The Regional Health Services Act. The standards for Special-care Homes are contained in the Program Guidelines for Special-care Homes as per the *Facility Designation Regulations*⁵²; it is the responsibility of the Health Authority to ensure that all regulations are met. Application for admission to a Special-care Home is made through your local Health Authority who will have a Client Care Coordinator assess your needs and determine eligibility. There are several parameters that encompass the assessment and will contribute to the determination of both need and urgency. This includes physical and mental status, abilities, formal and informal supports, current living environment and others. Priority is given to those with the highest needs and at greatest risk in the community. The cost residents pay is based on their reported income (indicated on line 150 of your Tax Return). Personal assets are not included in this determination. Rates are usually adjusted annually.

As of July 1, 2018, the minimum charge is $1,106.00/month (for those with a monthly income of $1,520.00/month) and the maximum is $2,741.00/month (for those with an income of $4,364.00/month and up). A special formula for those with a monthly income between $1,520.00 and $4,364.00 is applied to ensure affordability. In addition, there are other fees for some supplies and personal care items that are not included in the monthly room and board rate⁵³.

LONG-TERM CARE HOME VISITING TIPS

Recognizing that looking for a retirement residence vs, a long-term care home are two very different things, on the next few pages is a list of questions specifically geared towards those of you going through the process of choosing long-term care. Often, what separates the search for retirement homes from that of long-term care is time and circumstance. Time is usually of the essence when someone needs long-term care because in many cases an unsafe or inappropriate living situation necessitates the move. There is usually a significant difference in terms of the cost, care and options available in long-term care versus retirement level which results in different priorities and questions. So, employing the same ‘using your senses’ format of our Retirement Residence Visiting Tips questionnaire (including some questions that are common to both levels), this section has content based on the options that are available specifically in long-term care settings. As with retirement level, it is always best to visit homes before choosing. Keep in mind that you will likely need to make an appointment or attend at a pre-determined tour time. Prior to going on your tours, it would be best to review the questions on the next few pages, taking time to eliminate any questions that are not relevant to your situation or, highlighting those that are most important to you. Additionally, go online and visit the websites of the homes you are looking at. Doing so may raise some additional questions for you to ask during your tours. Take a new questionnaire to each place that you visit. For added insight and assistance, speak with others you meet currently going through the process, families visiting the homes, and current cognitively alert residents.

IF THIS IS RIGHT, WHY DO I FEEL SO BAD?

Caring for our elderly has changed over the years. In many families, children live great distances from their parents and women work full-time, so a multi-generational family living under one roof is neither feasible nor realistic. Caregiving is something we do from a distance or something we squeeze in among our other daily responsibilities. For many of us, the only safe and realistic alternative is to relocate yourself or a family member to a care home.

The decision to move yourself or a loved one into a care setting can be a difficult, highly emotional, life-altering process, which may create tremendous stress for all involved — on your relationships with each other, and in your daily lives. Along with the overwhelming responsibility of finding the right place is the realization that your relative is (or you are) aging and becoming less independent. There are many normal feelings that both the caregiver and the senior may experience at this time.

Elderly people who now require care that they hoped they would never need may be angry with physicians who cannot make them 'normal' again. They may be angry with family for not taking them into their homes and looking after them, as they may have done for their parents. They may feel guilty that they are imposing on their busy families or pride may interfere as they try to resist the idea of extra care or relocation by denying that they are unable to manage.

Change for anyone is scary. It is perfectly normal to be afraid of changing your home (especially for someone who has been in the same home for what is often a lifetime), daily routine and social interactions and relationships. This change may also involve a sense of loss (of control over one's life and decision making, independence, privacy, lifestyle, etc.). As people begin to feel dependent, they may become depressed or feel helpless. Financial issues often cloud decision-making. People are afraid they will spend their life savings and not have any money left for themselves or to leave to their families. A person in this situation may remain uncertain about what to do and may have difficulty expressing these fears and concerns to others.

Likewise, children or caregivers may also have difficulty discussing their feelings about their loved ones' increasing need for care. Some children may have trouble accepting or seeing their once invincible parent and protector become dependent. Often the role reversal between parent and child is hard to accept and cope with. Caregivers may be afraid to discuss their concerns because of how they think the person will react or because discussing it suddenly makes it 'real'. They may have misconceptions about what a residence is like or how the person will cope physically and mentally. One may feel guilty because he/she cannot provide the care that is needed for the person to remain at home or with family. Many have grown up with their parents caring for their grandparents and there is an expectation (or promise, made years earlier) that they would follow in their parents' footsteps. They may be angry at other siblings or relatives for not helping or providing care or with medical personnel for not making the person better.

Families may not notice a decline in cognition or physical health/independence occurring because of denial or infrequent contact. Realization may come suddenly, along with self-blame, sadness, depression, overwhelming anxiety, and feelings of failure, loss and confusion about what to do. If the ultimate decision involves letting go of the family home filled with memories of one's own childhood, this process may prove especially stressful for everyone involved. If your loved one does not have adequate funds, this transition may have financial implications for you as well.

CARING FOR THE CAREGIVER

In 2013, Statistics Canada published a paper entitled Portrait of caregivers, 2012 based on the General Social Survey⁵⁵. The results are quite staggering when reviewed in the context of our aging population. In 2012, more than 8 million people across our country were identified as being 'caregivers' – 28% of which indicated that they "provided care for age-related needs" (page 5, Portrait of caregivers, 2012). In the coming years, more families will be called upon to fulfill a caregiver role, as evidenced by the 2016 census which reflected an increased life expectancy and the new societal reality where the number of seniors in Canada is greater than that of children for the first time in history. In fact, the fastest growing segment of the population are centenarians. While the proportion of seniors varies by province, it is projected that by 2053, 23.5 to 26.8% of Canada's population will be 65 and up⁵⁶. As projections become reality, health care, housing, transportation and so many other things, including caregiving, will be affected. As people live longer, and stay healthy well into their senior years, those that will require care will presumably be older; logically, those family members who will become caregivers, will also be older and may be dealing with their own age-related issues at the same time as those of their elder parents'.

Regardless of one's age or situation, the overall impact of the caregiver role can affect both mental and physical health. For some who may also be juggling other family and paid work responsibilities, being a caregiver as well, will most definitely increase already existing stress levels. So, for those of our readers who have added caregiver to their list of roles – whether through choice or necessity, I thought it important to include some information for you, to both acknowledge how very difficult this task can be (for both the caregiver and recipient) and to offer some thoughts that might help you cope better.

Without doubt, it is most important that those providing care and support for a loved one “care” for themselves as much as the person they are caring for – seek out support, assistance and help that can allow you to carve out time to meet some of your own needs.

First and foremost, caregivers must communicate openly – with medical personnel, family, friends and their support network. Avoiding or negating problems does not help anyone and can easily escalate and impact relationships. Letting your employer know your situation — especially in the event of a crisis — is important as well. There may be available support groups, Employee Assistance Programs, paid family leave options or financial assistance (in the form of benefits or tax credits) available to you⁵⁷.

A key component to your role of caregiver is education. Educate yourself and help to educate other people assisting you with care. Knowledge is empowering, and can both decrease anxiety and help you provide the proper support. You need to seek out information about their medical condition, treatment options & resources available to both/all of you. This will enable you to plan ahead as much as possible (although the situation may change frequently so, flexibility is also necessary). If you take your loved one to medical appointments, write out questions you have prior to your appointment so you can ensure you cover all issues of concern. If you are providing physical care, make sure you know how to do this safely. If you do not feel you can do this, take some time to explore options for either in-home assistance or relocation.

There are many supports and resources available for caregivers however sometimes knowing where to locate what you need can be a bit of a challenge. As a first step, discuss your needs with the primary care physician. If he/she is unable to provide suggestions, ask for a referral to a local seniors or care agency that can help you to coordinate care and supports.

Sharing responsibilities with others is one of the most significant aspects of this role that benefits both the caregiver and the person they are caring for. Know when you need help and don't be afraid to ask or seek it out (accepting your limits and knowing the kind of care and help you are comfortable with is an important piece of this). Allow the person you are caring for to make as many decisions as they can for themselves if they are competent and they do not unnecessarily compromise their own safety. If other family members & friends can help, try to delegate tasks based on everyone's abilities, availability and limitations. Find out about community resources and use them. In addition to family, friends, private and community caregivers, consider using respite services, day programs, transportation programs, volunteers, etc. While learning to share responsibility might be difficult, it's important to recognize that good care and help can also be provided by people outside the immediate family.

For those who are 'long-distance caregivers' it is especially important to create a group of helpers who are near your loved one and can keep an eye on them through regular physical contact, so they can alert you if something is of concern. It's far easier to hide/downplay problems on the phone than in person. If you are far away, do make time to go for a visit (as often as you can), check the home for safety issues and familiarize yourself with health & financial issues. If required, ensure that a support network is in place before you leave to return home. Do what you can to organize paperwork, ensure contact information for helpers, obtain medical information and complete necessary financial documents to make things easier especially if you are coordinating care from a great distance. As well, there are many new technological tools that allow caregivers to monitor their loved ones from a distance. You may want to consider looking into the options available to you in your loved ones' community, especially if you are not able to visit often.

Caregiving will impact each person differently and can easily result in physical and mental health issues. Stress management may be an important factor in decreasing your risk of illness. By acknowledging your feelings (and accepting that it is completely normal to have all sorts of emotions when you are a caregiver including: anger, fear, guilt, frustration, grief and depression) and recognizing the signs of stress and its impact on you, you will be better able to cope with your situation and seek help before 'burnout' occurs. It's important for caregivers to accept and understand that while you might not be able to change the situation, you can control your reaction to it. Often being organized decreases stress as well. It might be helpful to create an Emergency File (see EMERGENCY FILE AND INFORMATION on pages 67 - 70) and a Communication Binder for people assisting with care that can be in the home of your loved one for all helpers to review and update when they visit.

⁵⁷ Compassionate Care Benefits are available to a maximum of 26 weeks through EI benefits for those who take time off to provide care for a “gravely ill family member”. For information visit www.canada.ca/en/employment-social-development/programs/ei/ei-list/reports/compassionate-care.html#h2.1. You may also want to investigate the Disability Tax Credit available to those with disabilities or “their supporting persons” (www.canada.ca/en/revenue-agency/services/tax/individuals/segments/tax-credits-deductions-persons-disabilities/disability-tax-credit.html) and the Canadian Caregiver Credit (www.canada.ca/en/revenue-agency/programs/about-canada-revenue-agency-cra/federal-government-budgets/budget-2017-building-a-strong-middle-class/consolidation-caregiver-credits.html).

The stress inherent in caring for someone else can be diminished if you are able to ensure a balance in your life. Prioritize tasks. Ensure that your goals are realistic. Accept that there will be good days and bad days. Do things for yourself every day: eat properly, exercise, sleep and take breaks when you need them. Don't neglect your own health - if you aren't feeling well, make the time to seek medical attention. Don't allow pressure from others or feelings of guilt to force you into doing something that you are not comfortable with or take on more than you can cope with. It really is okay to say 'no' if you can't do something. If you are 'sandwiched' between an older generation and a younger still dependent one, do keep in mind the importance of not sacrificing one for the other or your own mental health. Often it is helpful to join a support group of people struggling with similar issues (if it's not possible for you to go to physical group meetings, you may be able to find an online support network that you can take part in⁵⁸) or to seek out professional help if caregiving is impacting your functioning and health⁵⁹. Keep in mind that in order 'give care' to another person, you need to be in good physical and mental health yourself. It is only through self-care that you can remain well and able to fulfill the incredibly difficult and rewarding role of being a care giver to someone else.

MAKING THE TRANSITION EASIER

Change is difficult; especially when it involves coming to terms with a loss of independence and possibly relocating one's life and possessions. The transition and acceptance of what it entails, can be made easier with good communication, planning and patience. It is best if communication begins early on – before a decision is forced by circumstance or illness. I have heard repeatedly from both children and seniors how the 'other one' does not want to discuss future care issues. Children say that their parent won't accept that they may need care, while seniors say that their children cannot face seeing them age and become dependent. Often, at least one — if not both — of them is afraid to broach the subject, even though similar fears and concerns occupy their thoughts.

There is no 'easy way' or 'perfect time' to discuss the issue. No one wants to talk about losing their independence. The reality is that it ranks among one of the most difficult topics anyone will ever have to raise with someone they care about. But not talking about it does not make the problem or concerns go away. Discussing it (if all involved are open to it) can create a sense of relief for both parties. Often, we make assumptions based on our own fears instead of actual knowledge. The only way to attempt to make things better is to begin discussions with your loved one. Timing is an important factor. Talking about it early on, when they are healthy and before they need care or assistance, will allow you to get a sense of what they want without them questioning your motivation (if it is raised when the person is already in failing health, they may perceive it as an attempt to institutionalize them rather than as concern for their future safety and health). As well, discussing thoughts, ideas and options over time when the person is not under pressure, makes it far easier to accept & come to terms with a loss of independence and relocation than if it is raised when there is a crisis.

The approach you take will depend on the personality of your loved one. If they are someone that can handle a 'direct' approach, then do express concerns or ask what they would like you to do if they need care. You may want to discuss different scenarios to get a sense of the point at which they might be willing to relocate. For those that are harder to approach about declining health and functioning, talking about someone you or they know who did not have the foresight to plan ahead may be a safe starting point to begin a conversation. If they refuse to discuss it, the task is more difficult, and the issue may need to be approached from a different perspective or with the help of other trusted friends, relatives or medical personnel, especially if health and safety issues become evident. Keep in mind when exploring issues and concerns that a competent person has the right to live at risk if they so desire, and as hard it is to witness, it is still his/her right. No decision for placement of any kind can or should be made without the consent and knowledge of the person involved, if he/she is competent.

Unfortunately, there are instances where people insist on living at risk and, because they are capable of making their own decisions, nothing can be done to change the situation. In these very difficult cases, things may have to worsen before intervention can occur and things can get better. Sometimes a crisis, scare or health issue needs to happen before someone will be open to considering options.

When raising the topic of future planning, it is important to listen and be supportive. This can be a very frightening experience (especially if the person's health is declining and functioning independently is becoming difficult), and both the caregiver and senior may experience a range of emotions throughout the process. Be patient and caring as all of you try to process the conversation and implications of the available options on all family members as well as the person you are concerned about. Ensure that conversations are in person. The location of the meeting should be one that is comfortable for all parties and has limited or no distractions. It might be helpful for someone to create an agenda/checklist for the meeting (e.g. concerns, potential needs, options, tasks, etc.) to act as a guide and keep everyone on topic. Start slowly; try not to overwhelm the person. Ensure that there is an opportunity for all present to discuss any concerns, fears and feelings related to obtaining extra care and the possibility of moving. Stress the fact that when discussion begins early, there is much more choice available and a far better chance that the person will be able to remain independent in their own home for longer with the proper supports in place. Plan ahead and prepare yourself for the discussion. If possible, know their needs, value of their home/assets, monthly income, available resources (both community based and private) and costs before you raise your concerns. Present options thoughtfully and focus on what you see as the greatest need currently.

During the discussion, stay focused on the senior – not on what the family needs and wants. Agree to leave all old “baggage” at the door. Keep in mind the importance of what you are doing and the need not to become side-tracked by childhood issues and resentments. Try not to argue, coerce, judge, criticize or condescend; stick to the facts. State observations and concerns – don't demand actions or try to force what you want on them (use wording like “I am”, not “you must” e.g. “Mom, I am concerned about you....” NOT “You must go to a long-term care home...”). Allow your loved one to be part of the process and the solution. Give them an opportunity to speak and give their opinion. It is important to point out that if their wishes are not known in the event of a rapid health decline, the options may be much more limited and the person making the decision may make one that the senior is not happy with. Needless to say, it is also much more difficult to make such a decision on someone else's behalf if you are not confident that you know what their wishes are. If you can raise other issues during your meeting(s), you may want to also address financial/estate planning and end-of-life issues. These are also very important topics for families to discuss while a person is healthy and mentally alert.

Be open and honest with each other and problem-solve together. Focus on the positives and do what you can to encourage independence where possible (and safe). Teamwork is often a helpful way to relieve some of the stress for all parties. Create a plan including timelines. Involve trusted family members (who are all in agreement) in the process to assist with both emotional support and practical tasks. Clearly denote the tasks and expectations on all parties keeping in mind that if possible, no one person should be expected to take on all the responsibility for care. Expect to have multiple meetings to deal with concerns and look at solutions. You might need to ‘pick your battles’ or compromise at some point especially if there are some things that your loved one stands firm on. Know when it's important to back down on something, even if only temporarily.

For most, there is truly no place like home, so if possible, you should first look at options to help the person remain at home, albeit with help or support (and possibly some home modifications) for as long as possible (if all safety concerns can be properly addressed). It may be helpful to have an Occupational Therapist review safety issues in the home if you have concerns. If this is not possible, ensure you remove tripping hazards (electrical cords, throw rugs, furniture), assess kitchen safety (if there are concerns, consider options to decrease the risk), check the bathroom area (install assistive devices that will help prevent falls), etc. (See section on HOME SAFETY & MODIFICATIONS on pages 5 - 6).

To locate in-home supports, start by researching the available services for seniors in their area. Your LHIN (in Ontario) or government-funded home care agency (in other provinces) may be able to help you with this. If there are available funds, you may also wish to look at some private services. Ensure you visit often to monitor the situation. This will allow you to determine when added supports or intervention becomes necessary. Sometimes, if in-home options have been explored & tried first, it makes it easier for the senior to accept the possibility of moving into a care setting.

If, after careful consideration, it is decided that the best option is relocation, you may find that it is a highly emotional process for everyone involved, especially if it involves selling the family home and many of the possessions in it. It is important to stress that moving will not erase the memories that are connected to the house or its contents.

If you decide that the most feasible solution is to move the person into your home (see section on LIVING WITH FAMILY on pages 10 - 11), do keep in mind that this will likely change the family dynamics and relationships of those within the home and potentially with other family members who do not live with you. Issues around physical space, tasks, care needs, lifestyle changes, work schedules, personal time, home safety/modifications, finances and a host of other things need to be addressed before finalizing this as a viable solution.

If the decision is to relocate to a care home⁶⁰ allow the search for – and move to – a new home to be a co-operative process. Involve the person who will be experiencing the change in the decision-making as much as possible. This will assist them in feeling that they still have control over their life and future. It is best to avoid frequent moves so look for homes that can manage the person's needs/care now and in the future, should they require more assistance at a later date. Address any financial concerns early on. Know your/their budget so you will know what is affordable before you start looking. Determine where the best location for a new home would be so that relatives & friends can visit often and without difficulty, and if able, your loved one can feel comfortable going out in the neighbourhood. For those in other provinces where care homes are licensed, do make time to review the relevant legislation. For example, if you are looking for a retirement community in Ontario, get to know the Retirement Homes Act and Ontario's Residential Tenancies Act so you know whether homes are abiding by these two important pieces of legislation when you interview them. Before moving forward, you may also want to review home license and inspection reports on the various provincial inspection websites (e.g. RHRA in Ontario at www.rhra.ca, Personal Care Homes site in Saskatchewan at <http://personalcarehomes.saskatchewan.ca/>, Public Reporting of Accommodations Standards in Alberta at <http://standardsandlicensing.alberta.ca/> and in BC, The Assisted Living Registry at www.health.gov.bc.ca/assisted/locator/index.php/displaycommunity/index) of homes you are considering. Make a wish list of wants and needs with your relative, recognizing that some things may have to be compromised. Take special note of what they are unwilling to concede on. This allows you to be aware of what is most important to them. Work with them to compose a list of questions to ask while touring places (see RETIREMENT RESIDENCE VISITING TIPS on pages 26 - 43). Take them to visit residences. Make a list of pros and cons of each place. If possible, encourage a trial stay in the prospective residence before finalizing plans for moving. Talk to people you (or they) know who have been through this process already, either for themselves or for someone else. They may be able to make some valuable suggestions on how to find the perfect home and how to help you or your loved one adjust to their new surroundings.

Family support throughout the process is of paramount importance. To help decrease anxiety, offer to help them make a list of everything that needs to be done before moving day. It might be a good idea to help your relative decide which things they can take with them and how to dispose of what can't be accommodated in their new home. Keep in mind the overwhelming experience that sorting a lifetime of possessions entails as one tries to separate the 'memories from the possessions'. This is especially difficult for people who are moved without much notice (e.g. after an illness or hospitalization directly to a care home). In order to assist with the adjustment to relocation, they may need an opportunity to say "good-bye" to all they held dear for many years, so you may need to arrange for a 'day visit' to their old home to give them some closure.

⁶⁰ The information related to making the transition easier in this section is primarily geared toward those who are at an independent or retirement home level. If your loved one requires long-term care, this process may be significantly different for you and, both your time to decide and the options available will be far more limited than if they decide to move when they are healthier and require little or no assistance.

Help your loved one to maintain and relocate their memories. Often people save possessions that link them to something in their past. While these items may not hold the same 'value' to others, where possible try to find ways to help them preserve some favourite treasures. If there are items that some relatives are fond of, perhaps suggest that they pass them on, so they can be 'visited' rather than given to strangers. Focus on keeping furniture that will easily fit in a small space but will help them to feel like their new place is their home. Do spend time sharing memories and discussing feelings around the move.

Help sort & pack, arrange for storage and movers, assist with change of address notifications, be present on the day of the move and, if possible, help them decorate the room and settle in. Ensure that the suite is cleaned and in good working order, if possible, before the furniture is in. You may want to spend your first few visits exploring and becoming familiar with the new neighbourhood together. Ask the Home Administrator if they can match you/your loved one with a current resident with similar interests who can help with learning the routine and adjusting to the new surroundings.

Many people are concerned that once they are in a retirement residence or long-term care home, their family will not visit them. Reassure them that this will not happen by continuing to visit and taking them out as much as possible. Schedule outings, plan private time and activities you can enjoy together, continue to celebrate special events and update them on family happenings. You are still their caregiver, but the way in which you provide care has changed. Knowing they are safe and well cared for will afford you more time to socialize and spend quality time together. Your visits can be spent enjoying each other's company, rather than focusing on personal care and household tasks which may have consumed your time when the person lived independently.

Despite this potential positive change to your relationship, keep in mind that there will be an adjustment period. It is important to be supportive and continue communicating regularly and frequently, both with your loved one and residence personnel. Get to know the staff and help them get to know your relative. If there are concerns, be sure to discuss them promptly with the appropriate staff.

Allow your loved one to talk about his/her feelings with you; don't avoid uncomfortable discussions. Listen and don't fear talking about the past but, if negative or depressed feelings persist for a prolonged period after the move — in either you or them — you may want to consider seeking out support or counselling from a trained professional. If you require assistance in locating a counsellor, you can contact your local Family Service Association (www.familyservicecanada.org/member-benefits/current-members-by-province/), community information agency (<http://211.ca>) or your family doctor.

DOWNSIZING TIPS

For those who may be relocating with limited or no assistance, it might be helpful to plan your packing and moving tasks well in advance of your actual move date. Where you move will determine what you can take with you. More independent settings will usually allow for more furnishings while more dependent settings like long-term care homes, will dictate that very few items beyond clothing accompany the person.

If possible, well in advance of moving, start de-cluttering. Throw out whatever you can including unnecessary papers, clothes, etc. Put all important documents that you deem necessary to keep, in one place so they are easy to locate when you need them. Paring down and organizing your possessions will save you time when it comes to packing and allow you to focus on other important tasks (if this is too overwhelming you may want to hire a professional organizer to assist with this). When considering what you will take to your new home, eliminate possessions that are not useful, functional or overly important to you. Items should be durable and easy to care for but most importantly they should fit in your new place and allow space for you to comfortably move around.

When you begin sorting belongings, don't try to overwhelm yourself with doing everything in one day. Remember to ASK FOR HELP if you need it. Allow yourself a set amount of time per day (try 2 - 3 hours to start with). Before starting to pack, make sure you have what you need (boxes/tape, etc.). Start with the least used room first, work in one room at a time and start by sorting large items. You may wish to use a "colour coding system" to label boxes that will go in different rooms (e.g., green labels for the kitchen, red for the bedroom, etc.). Ensure you have a floor plan (with exact dimensions) of your new home before deciding on furniture. It is helpful to "map out" the size of certain items so you can see what will fit in the space you have. If you have rooms with similar dimensions in your home, use them to gauge what things will look like in your new setting. Make a list of the items you are keeping and where you want them to go in your new home.

For items you don't need, don't want or can't take with you, create several piles or boxes for different things - one will be to keep and take with you to your new home, another to throw in the garbage or recycle (if you are throwing out a lot, there are companies that can come and pick up your "junk" for a fee), another to give to family/friends, and a fourth to give to charity (some organizations will pick up items from you and/or give you a tax receipt). If there are items you want to sell, create a fifth pile and consider having a garage sale (enlist the family to help with this) or list items on a reputable website that sells used goods. Additionally, there are many consignment shops that might be able to find a home for clothing and household items in good condition. While they do take a portion of the sale price, they will give you money for those items they can sell, saving you the time and effort it would take for you to do so on your own. Do keep your expectations of financial return reasonable and weigh the value of what you might get, with the time and effort it will take to sell the items, when deciding on the best route to dispose of old belongings. Be sure to check pockets, drawers, books, etc. for things you may have hidden and forgotten about. It is not uncommon to read a story of someone who finds something valuable at a garage sale or in something they purchased at a consignment store. If you have expensive items or things you suspect are of great value, you might want to arrange for an appraisal and then seek out an auction house or an estate sale company.

There will likely be items that you cannot take with you but want to stay in the family because they hold special meaning to you. Take the time to write down the stories behind those treasures which you can then give your loved ones with each item. Additionally, you may want to create a 'memory book' with photos of things that you hold dear that you can take with you to your new home. Keep in mind that some items you treasure may not have the same meaning to your loved ones or, things that you are not particularly attached to may be special to others. If possible, allow those you have chosen to give pieces to, to pick what they would like to keep. It is far nicer to share items that are important to you with others when you can see them being enjoyed and, it will make you feel much better knowing your special things are with people that will treasure them as much as you do. Make every effort to preserve family photos and mementos. While not everyone is sentimental, there are often children or grandchildren who would be more than willing to be the keeper of your family history.

Prior to moving, make a list of tasks, target dates and the person responsible. Ensure you have sent out move notifications to everyone who sends you mail - family, friends, credit card companies, insurance, banks, any government offices, etc. or have your mail redirected (or both). Arrange for movers and a realtor if you have a property to sell. Notify utilities and your landlord (if you are renting). Should the task of packing and/or moving be overwhelming, you may also want to consider the option of hiring a downsizing/relocation company that specializes in moving seniors and can handle your move in its entirety (packing, moving, unpacking etc.) There are several of these in existence, many of which are listed in Part 2 of this Guide (SERVICES AND RESOURCES FOR SENIORS under Downsizing and Relocation, pages 76 - 80). When choosing a company to assist you with this difficult task, interview them in person, get detailed estimates from more than one company and ask for references. Hire the person you feel most comfortable with and one who you believe understands your needs and will make this process easier and less stressful for you. It is helpful if they have experience with the place you have chosen to move to, so they can best advise you on the specifics of your move, procedures, best items to take, etc.

On Moving Day pack a small bag with items you will need for the day, including any medications and snacks. Arrange for a friend or relative to accompany you and stay with you for the day. Unpack important items first and hang your pictures right away; it is what will make you feel at home!

EMERGENCY FILE AND INFORMATION

A good idea for everyone, because unexpected illness or injury can happen to anyone regardless of age or circumstance, is the creation of an Emergency File. This becomes even more important when you are, or when you have relatives who are, older. There may be a time (or several times), when you or your loved ones must locate information that might impact their/your care or needs, quickly. Having all documents in one place will make this a far easier task than potentially sorting through what may be, years of papers.

This file should be reviewed/updated annually, to ensure that everything in it is accurate. If you are putting important documents in this file, it would be best to keep photocopies only in the file and store originals in a safe place. For legal documents like Powers of Attorney, do make a few copies in case financial institutions or medical personnel are required to hold onto them. If you are creating an Emergency File for yourself, inform your close relatives where it is in the event of an emergency. Ensure it is well-labelled so it can be found easily. In order for it to have the flexibility of adding information, you may wish to put it in something that allows pages to be inserted. An accordion file works well for someone with many kinds of papers but for others, a 3-ring binder with dividers may be sufficient. Ensure that all caregivers involved know the location of the Emergency File/Binder in case specific documents are needed by any involved parties.

It is also helpful to create a document with important medical facts about the person you are providing care for (or for yourself) that is easy to access in an emergency or even simply for when you are attending appointments or sharing information with a care team (see list in Medical Information section below). A master copy of the document should be included in your Emergency File/Binder and updated as necessary. Below is a list of items and documents which will assist you in organizing important personal & care information for your Emergency File/Binder. ⁶¹

PERSONAL INFORMATION:

- Name
- Spouse/Partner Name
- Address
- Phone Number
- Birthdate
- Place of Birth
- Religious/Cultural Affiliation
- Language(s) Spoken
- Social Insurance Number
- Passport Number/Expiry
- Birth Certificate
- Veteran Status/Number
- Immigration Documents
- Marriage Certificate
- If no longer married include Divorce Certificate or Spouse's Death Certificate
- Children's Names & Birthdates
- Emergency Contact Names and Phone Number

If possible, take a photocopy of each document and keep it in your file.

MEDICAL INFORMATION:

In your file include any documents related to health issues.

(If you are a caregiver and take your loved one to all appointments – or if you share this task with others, you might want to create a separate document with the information in this category that you can reference during appointments and a journal of all appointments where you can document what was discussed, any follow-up decided upon as well as contact information/business cards for all doctors.)

⁶¹ A detailed Emergency File document that you can complete, is available on our website <https://www.senioropolis.com/BookInfo.asp>. Alternatively, a more complex Care Planning Workbook, can be downloaded from the Online Store at www.seniorcareaccess.com.

- Health Card # and Expiry Date.
- Extended Health Policies/Health Insurance/Long Term Care Insurance – note the policy number, company and contact person.
- Allergies – including treatment and reactions.
- Disabilities/Impairments – include information on any necessary assisted devices.
- Surgeries – include type, date and surgeon.
- Hospitalizations – include date, reason and doctor.
- Other Physical or Mental Health Issues – include date of diagnosis and treating doctor.
- All Medications – include prescription, non-prescription, herbal and vitamins. Ensure that you indicate dosage, frequency, the reason for the medication, the prescribing MD and any side effects.

(If you are a caregiver, ensure you take a list of all medications to doctor's appointments so medication reactions can be easily avoided.)

- Family Health Issues – note any chronic or hereditary mental and physical health issues in parents, siblings and children. Include the age of diagnosis if known.
- For those who have deceased parents or siblings – indicate what they died of and their age of death.
- List of Tests, X-rays, Procedures, etc. – include the referring MD, date, type and the results/treatment given.
- List of Immunizations – indicate the date and the person who administered it.
- List of all Medical Doctors/Specialists – include their address, phone number and specialty.
- Pharmacy/Pharmacist – include address and phone number.
- Dentist/Denturist – include address and phone number.
- List of all Dental Procedures – include date and the person who did the procedure.

FINANCIAL INFORMATION:

- List all Credit and Bank Cards – include the type of card, number, full name on card, expiry and PIN. (You may wish to photocopy all cards and keep them in your file.)
- Bank Accounts – include bank name, branch address, bank account number, name on bank account and contact name of staff person at the branch.

(Photocopy bank statements from each account and keep them in in your file. If you are a caregiver, you may want to ask the bank about getting signing authority on our loved one's bank accounts.)

- Safety Deposit Box - note the bank branch it is located at, number of the box and location of the key. You may wish to inventory all items in the box. If you do not have signing authority on the account, speak to the bank about how you can become a secondary access person for it.
- List all Monthly Bills – include the company, due date, account number and how the bill is paid. (For bills that are being paid with a monthly cheque, you may want to set up a direct withdrawal from a bank account.)
- List of Monthly Deposits – include the company, date of deposit, amount and the account it is deposited to.
- Life Insurance Policies – list the company, policy number, phone number and contact person. (Review and familiarize yourself with all policies.)
- Debts – include who the debt is owed to, the amount owing and a contact person with phone number.
- Pensions – include the source, monthly amount, contact person with phone number.

- Ensure you have copies of tax returns/notices of assessments from the last couple of years and file in a location that is easy to access (or in your Emergency File).

If your loved one is on a limited income, you may want to review the CRA website (www.canada.ca/en/revenue-agency/services/tax/individuals/segments/changes-your-taxes-when-you-retire-turn-65-years-old.html) to ensure they are receiving all available tax credits and pension benefits.

- Assets – list each asset and approximate value.
- Properties – list all properties owned, co-owners, if there is a mortgage include documents in file, deeds and tax bill.
- Investments – list all stocks, bonds, RRSPs, RIFs, TFSAs, etc. Include company, account number, beneficiary, contact person and phone number.
- Debts Owed to Person – if anyone owes money or property to the person, list their information and include any formal documentation about the debt and payment plan.

You may wish to include any documents related to financial obligations and investments in your master file.

LEGAL DOCUMENTS:

Ensure you have up-to-date, signed and witnessed copies of any Powers of Attorney (if you are the attorney you will need an original to use it), a Will & Living Will/Advanced Directive. Indicate the location of the original and copies as well as information about the lawyer who prepared it. Ensure any attorneys are aware that they have this responsibility and have photocopies of the document.

VEHICLE INFORMATION:

If your loved one owns and drives their own car still, ensure you have vehicle ownership and insurance information on file.

PETS:

List names, type of pet, any health conditions, medications, special diets, pet insurance policy number and contact information for their Veterinarian.

CONTACTS:

- Professional Contacts - include lawyers, accountant, financial advisor and insurance agents with phone numbers and addresses.
- Internet Passwords – list all banking and other website passwords with the correct URL and email address to access information.
- Personal Contacts – include friends, family, neighbours and their phone numbers.
- Memberships – list of any organizations and contact information that they are a member of.
- Care Team – list caregivers, agencies, clergy, etc. Include the organization they are attached to, their role and phone number.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS:

If prearrangements have been made – include any related information – funeral home, cemetery, location, etc. If there are specific instructions related to the funeral service, include on a separate piece of paper. Keep all issued documents in your file.

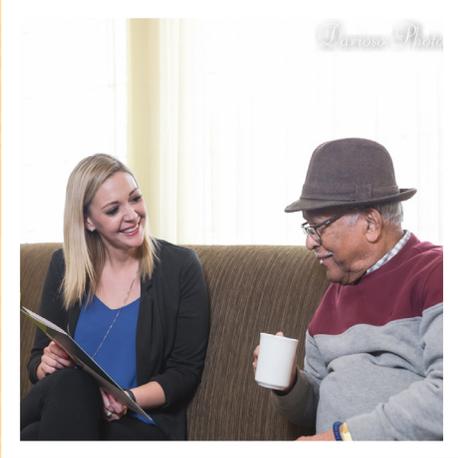

MISCELLANEOUS:

If you have come across documents, passwords, contact names of people important to you or your loved one, do include them in your document/file. It is always helpful to photocopy and file any important documents you may require at some point in the future.

DOWNSIZING TIP

Get a floor plan of the apartment or suite you will be moving into with the exact square footage of the rooms. This will allow you to determine what large items will fit in the space you have. If you have rooms with similar dimensions in your current home, have a look at what fits in those spaces and use it as a guide to help you choose items for your new home.

How to Choose a Home Health Care Provider Advice from the Care Experts at Bayshore Home Health

Website: www.bayshore.ca • Phone: 1 (877) 289-3997

Today more than two million Canadians receive care at home – a number that will continue to climb as our population ages. Knowing what to look for and the right questions to ask is an important part of choosing the home health provider that is right for you.

Home health care lets seniors who want to stay in their homes remain independent for as long as possible. But hiring the right help can be confusing, so we suggest you ask all of the following questions to be sure you find the right provider for you.

- What kind of services do you provide?
- What type of training has your staff received?
- How do you ensure the quality of your service?
- How do you evaluate the skills and abilities of your staff?
- How long have you been in operation?
- Do you provide a personalized care plan?
- Will you consult with my doctor?
- Will my caregiver be supervised by a nurse?
- Will you assist in investigating my home care funding options?
- Do you ensure your staff are bonded, insured and professionally licensed or certified?

To learn more about the benefits of a personalized home health care plan, please visit www.bayshore.ca.

Bayshore Home Health has been enhancing the quality of life, dignity and independence of Canadians in their homes since 1966. Canadian owned and operated, we offer a wide range of home and community health care services through more than 60 offices across the country.

WILLS

What is a Will?

A written legal document setting out what is to happen after death to his/her property and who will be the guardian of his/her children. A Will must be in writing and should be dated and properly witnessed.

A Will can be revoked or replaced by another Will at any time as long as you are mentally competent. Because circumstances, beneficiaries, or assets change, conduct an annual review, especially if you become engaged, married, separated, and/or have children.

Why make a Will?

1. If you don't have one your estate will be divided according to provincial intestacy laws, which may not reflect your wishes. Property would devolve to your next of kin without regard for your fondness for certain people, and not to non-blood relatives, your common-law spouse, or charities. With a Will, you maintain the freedom to benefit those as you please, for the most part.
2. You will have the freedom to choose a guardian (custodian) for your minor children, a trustee of their money and specify at which age they will receive their inheritance.
3. If you marry, your Will is automatically revoked unless it specifies that it is made in contemplation of a forthcoming marriage. If you are married but separated, your estranged spouse may inherit your share of the family property unless your Will or a separation agreement states otherwise.
4. It is less expensive for your beneficiaries if you have a Will. If you do not, an Estate Trustee (the manager of your estate) will have to be appointed by the court and may be required to post a bond. Appointing a Trustee in a Will may reduce the potential for disagreements between beneficiaries.

Not all property passes by operation of a Will. Some pass by contract or by the operation of law. For example: jointly owned property (such as a house held in Joint Tenancy), or bank accounts, GICs, life insurance proceeds, registered RSPs, RIFs, and pensions payable to a designated individual, not to your estate.

Provincial laws may apply to limit what you can do with your property. Your spouse may make a claim for a division of property or to take what is given to him/her in the Will. Children and spouses may claim to be "dependents". "Dependents" may include: your: spouse, common law spouse, former spouse, children, including those born out of wedlock, born after the testator's death and a person you treated as a child of your family (step-children), parent, sibling to whom you were supporting or have a legal obligation to support. You must make adequate provisions for them, just as you would when alive. If you fail to make adequate provisions, the court may order the estate to make payments to some or all of them in an amount it sees fit.

Who gets what if you die without a Will?

Under the Succession Law Reform Act, the spouse gets the first \$200,000.00 of the net value of the estate. If there is one child, he/she also gets $\frac{1}{2}$ of the residue, and the child gets the other half. If there is more than one child, the spouse gets the first \$200,000.00 and $\frac{1}{3}$ of the remainder and the children share equally the other $\frac{2}{3}$.

CONTINUING POWER OF ATTORNEY FOR PERSONAL PROPERTY

A Continuing Power of Attorney for Personal Property (POA) is a legal document to give another person legal authority to make decisions about their finances and property, if they become unable to make those decisions themselves.

It may also authorize only a specific transaction, for example: listing your house and/or signing the Agreement of Purchase and Sale for you. The power of attorney is called "Continuing" because it continues to be used after you are no longer mentally capable of making those financial decisions yourself. It may also be used if you cannot physically handle the finances and need someone to attend at the bank, or anywhere else for you. The POA may be limited to a time or task, or give a general blanket authority.

You may appoint sole or joint attorneys, for example: they may be your child and a trust company or your children who will share the job or divide the responsibilities among them. They may act together or separately. Two attorneys offer a "double check" and less risk of inconsistent decisions.

If you do not have a Power of Attorney, the Public Guardian and Trustee may be appointed by the court to manage your property.

The POA will give the attorney authority to act as soon as it is made, unless you specify otherwise. You may still, however, look after your own affairs while still mentally capable. Give the attorney a copy of the POA. Set a specific start date or a particular event to trigger its use.

POWER OF ATTORNEY FOR PERSONAL CARE (POAPC)

Sometimes called "living wills", because they are thought to be Wills taking effect while you are alive. This is a misnomer. A Will, by definition, takes effect only upon your death.

A POAPC may be used to empower someone else to make decisions for you concerning your diet, clothing, health care, medical procedures, drugs, safety, residence when you are mentally unable to do so yourself. It cannot be employed to make decisions regarding your property and finances, although you may appoint the same person to be both types of attorney.

You may appoint different people for different types of decision-making. For example, one for health care and another for personal decisions like food, housing, etc.

You may make restrictions or provide specific instructions to your attorney. You may also give the attorney a blanket authority to make all decisions for you. Alternatively, you may decline treatment such as artificial life supports or the taking of heroic or extraordinary measures, as determined by your attorney alone or in consultation with your doctor(s), a doctor of your attorney's choosing, or a religious adviser and/or family members. You may specify that your attorney must get confirmation of your incapacity before he/she acts, and how the confirmation is to be obtained (i.e. by your doctor, etc.).

The attorney is required to follow your instructions, despite his personal beliefs, unless it is impossible for him to do so. If no instructions are provided, your attorney must make decisions according to what he/she believes are in your best interests at the time.

Neither type of Power of Attorney is filed with the Public Guardian and Trustee. It is kept in your safe deposit box or other safe place.

Harvey Goldstein is a family lawyer who has been practicing law for over 30 years. He specializes in Wills, Powers of Attorney, Divorce, Separation, Custody and Property Division.

Secrets to Longevity Lifestyle Choices Today That Can Reap Benefits Tomorrow

Will you be dancing at your grandchild's wedding? How about your great-grandchild's wedding? Some super-agers are not only dancing, but also cooking, walking, and golfing past the age of 90. With life expectancy on the rise, researchers are attempting to figure out how we can increase our healthy life spans. So, exactly what lifestyle choices matter the most for longevity?

Don't sweat the small stuff

One of the more memorable comments from one of my clients was "Please don't refer to me as a senior. I would prefer to be called a mature adult with significantly reduced filters". A positive attitude with an optimistic outlook helps reduce stress and enhances healthy living. Get rid of negativity even if it means distancing yourself from friends that drag you down. Put things in perspective and don't let the little things in life drive you crazy.

Diet is a key ingredient to a long life

Diet tends to be one of the most important factors for better health and a longer life. Researcher, Dan Buettner set off around the globe to answer the question: Why do people in some parts of the world live longer than others? Buettner teamed up with National Geographic to identify five "Blue Zones" that have the highest percentage of the world's longest-lived and healthiest people. The Blue Zones include Loma Linda, California; Ikaria, Greece; Sardinia, Italy; Okinawa, Japan; and Nicoya, Costa Rica. A common thread in all areas was a healthy diet. Many of them had plant based diets with very little red meat with beans as a primary source of protein. The Mediterranean diet was also common – plenty of fruits and vegetables, whole grains, fish and seafood, nuts, olive oil, yogurt, traditional cheeses and of course, red wine in moderation.

Get moving

Regular exercise equals longevity. Our bodies are designed to be active every day. It's not a secret that physical activity burns calories, tones muscles, and keeps you looking and feeling fit. But, there is a bonus benefit to exercise: it acts as a powerful vaccine against the aging process itself.

Keep your brain sharp

By flexing your mind in productive ways, you can lower your risk of mental decline as you age. The single biggest cause of Alzheimer's disease is aging. When it comes to memory & using your brain, studies have shown that physical & cognitive exercise is one of the best ways to keep our minds sharp.

Socialize

Maintaining a proper diet, finding a routine for physical exercise and keeping your brain sharp, all take some effort and dedication. The same can be said with trying to have an active social life. However, the benefits are plentiful. Study after study demonstrate the advantages of being social. They include a greater sense of belonging, better quality of life, enhanced mental health and increased self esteem. Just as important, it combats social isolation, one of the greatest causes of depression and advanced aging.

We're all here for a relatively short period of time. Enjoy life while you can. You'd be amazed how contagious it is.

It's Never Too Late – Embracing the Aging Process

Email: mdelvecchio@lianasservices.com

As our population ages, life expectancy increases. There are some seniors that look at the aging process in a negative light as they fear what lies ahead. This thought process can usually increase the risk of depression and generally make life miserable for the individual as well as their friends and loved ones.

There are fortunately many other seniors that have chosen the optimistic route by displaying a positive attitude and embracing the aging process. There are many inspirational stories of individuals such as the four Australian swimmers in their 80's and 90's setting a world record in the 200-metre freestyle. Then there is the amazing Hazel McCallion who retired from politics at the age of 93 after 12 consecutive terms as mayor of Mississauga. She is 97 and still going strong as the Chief Elder Officer for Revera, a leading operator in the senior living sector.

There is one common theme behind all these “Super Seniors” – ATTITUDE!!

They have chosen to make a difference on their own terms. You can do the same. It doesn't have to be the grandiose, social media activity that goes viral. It could be very simple. It all starts with small steps that can be achievable. Make it something that you are passionate about. Most of all, make it happen!!

Start by putting it in writing. If you want something to happen, put pen to paper the good old-fashioned way. Then tell people about it. Let your friends know. Let your loved ones know. They will help you along the way.

Why not begin with your bucket list? This could be traveling to a destination that you have always wanted to visit. Why wait? Book that trip!!! I have spoken to far too many seniors that wished they would have traveled earlier on because they are now limited due to mobility issues.

Pursue your passion. You have worked hard your entire life. Kids and family were probably always your priority. It's time to put yourself first. It could be as simple as becoming a member of an organization; joining a club; a dance class; an art class; yoga; cooking class; theater group; cycling; swimming; learning to play a musical instrument; getting to know computers or becoming a mentor.

Many people sing the praises of volunteering. Fulfilling, gratifying, enjoyable and pleasing are just a few of the adjectives I have heard used by seniors that have chosen to make a difference in the lives of others.

Try stepping it up a bit. Why not pursue more adventurous activities? It's not unheard of for seniors to try things for the first time including parachuting; fantasy sports camps or becoming a freelance writer. Why not get that tattoo that you were always embarrassed to get? The grandkids will love you.

The side benefit to many of these activities is that it will promote physical and mental stimulation – two important ingredients to prolonged and sustained health. Don't put it off any longer. There's no better time than now!!

Matt Del Vecchio is the founder and president of Lianas Services, Retirement Home Search and Senior Transition Support. Time to Save For Your Funeral; CPP Isn't Going To Do It For You

Contributed by: Adrian Walton, BA, Dip FSE, CEA

Website: www.resolvedestate.ca • Phone: 1 (844) 944-0900

Email: askus@resolvedestate.ca

In December 2017, Canada's Finance Ministers met to review the Canada Pension Plan system, including the "CPP Death Benefit", frozen for over 20 years at a maximum of $2,500.

Representatives of Canada's funeral industry argued that had this benefit been indexed, the amount today would be over $5,500. In case you didn't know, the CPP Death Benefit in 1997 was $3,580 before it was cut to the current figure.

So what was the outcome of the Finance Ministers' meeting? The CPP Death Benefit will remain fixed at $2,500 and will NOT be indexed.

There is a little good news for some. Beginning in 2019, the $2,500 benefit will be available to all CPP recipients, instead of being rated against contributions or CPP income. However, it will remain taxable and an application will continue to be required. It cannot be paid directly to the funeral home. In most cases, the CPP Death Benefit is payable to the estate.

In Ontario, it is not unusual for funeral costs to exceed $11,000, and they can easily approach $15,000, especially in larger cities. If you want to be buried, hopefully you have rights to a grave purchased long ago. If not, expect to pay anywhere from $3,000 to $10,000 for that, on top of funeral home costs. Would you like that grave marked with some sort of memorial? That's extra too.

The lesson here is not new, but seems more important than ever before. Funeral and final expense funding, in one form or another, must be an integral part of retirement and estate planning. These expenses are a certainty. Costs for even the most basic funeral are significant and generally payable immediately. At best, they will be required within days of a death. Cemetery and crematorium fees are almost always payable in advance.

Legal costs, the Ontario "Estate Administration Tax" (formerly "probate" fees and the highest in Canada) and various estate resolution costs can easily total several thousands of dollars. Even when an estate's value far exceeds projected "final expenses", almost all are payable well before the estate is settled and funds become available.

There's a little good news here too. There are opportunities, options and incentives available for Canadians to protect themselves and their families. Canada Revenue Agency designates a tax-free saving plan known as the Eligible Funeral Arrangement (EFA) with a lifetime contribution limit up to $35,000 per person. Think of it as a TFSA for funeral costs.

An EFA, regardless of the funding vehicle, must be linked to a contract with a funeral service provider. Contributions to the EFA can exceed the value of the funeral. This excess, with its interest, is paid tax-free for other qualifying final expenses.

One of the most popular funding plans in use is a unique insured annuity, specially developed to qualify as an EFA and comply with provincial bereavement industry regulations. The contributor makes manageable, interest free, deposits to their EFA over several years. Should they die before the scheduled deposits are completed, their family won't be left struggling to make up the shortfall. The full "insured" EFA value, plus interest on that insured value, will be immediately available to satisfy the intended final expenses and contracted funeral services.

Yes, other funding options are available for the tax-free EFA. However, many see the insured annuity plan as a wise choice since existing savings and assets are preserved while funeral and some other costs are guaranteed. It's affordable, tax-free peace of mind.

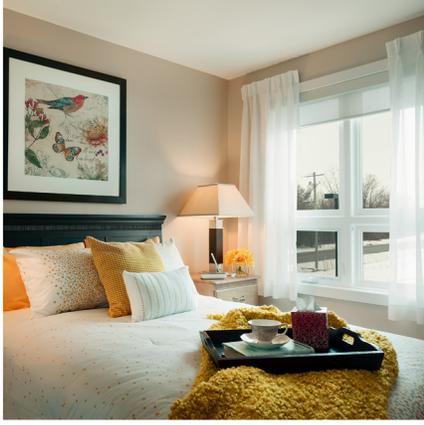

It has always been essential to consider final expense provisions as part of your retirement and estate planning. As costs for these inevitable services increase, and assistance available continues to decrease, it makes no sense to put it off any longer.

Adrian Walton is Co-founder of RESOLVED, offering independent advocacy and guidance in final wishes planning and funding, as well as Certified Executor Advisor support and final document preparation services for Ontario Estate Trustees.

OTHER SERVICES: This section includes housekeeping, laundry, security, transportation, nightly security checks, telephone*, cable TV*, internet, utilities and any other amenities/services. Note: some or all the services listed in this section may not be included in the monthly fee and/or some might be priced separately or as part of "care packages". We encourage you to contact the home directly for clarification and specific pricing.

RENTAL INFORMATION: This section includes the cost for couples sharing suites, how and how often rent is paid, if units can be purchased, standardized rent increases, amount of notice given for increases, whether help moving is available (cost), and the possibility of short-term respite (cost) and trial stays (cost).

*Most homes will have outlets in each room or suite but, cable TV and telephone costs are usually not included in the monthly fee, unless specified in either ACCOMMODATION, OTHER SERVICES or BOTH sections.

GLOSSARY OF TERMS

ACCA – Alberta Continuing Care Association: See description on page 49.

ADL – Activities of Daily Living: Encompass the skills required for a person to live independently. They include: personal care activities such as feeding, dressing, bathing, daily hygiene tasks, toileting and other activities such as walking, thinking, speaking and hearing.

ASCHA – Alberta Seniors Communities and Housing Association: See description on page 25.

Assisted Living Services/Care: Also called ADL/AL care. Caregivers come to your suite to provide necessary care and assistance with Activities of Daily Living. Some residences may include some minimal care and assistance in their base fee, while others allow you to purchase assistance (or private duty care) on an hourly basis. Some residences have different Care Packages, offering varying degrees of in-suite assistance.

Assisted Living Area: Sometimes called Assisted Daily Living (ADL) Unit, Special Care Unit/Floor, Enhanced Care Floor or Personal Care Unit. A separate unit, floor or area in a retirement residence devoted to the care of individuals who require assistance with their Activities of Daily Living beyond what is normally offered and available in the rest of the residence. In some homes where care for the cognitively impaired is offered in a special area/floor, they will have safety measures to prevent wandering off the unit, such as locked exits and coded elevators. If exits are locked, the unit is often referred to as a Secure Area/Floor. There is usually an extra charge to reside in this type of unit.

BCCPA – British Columbia Care Providers Association: See description on page 51.

BCLSA – British Columbia Seniors Living Association: See description on page 24.

CHIP – Care Home Information Package (Ontario): All retirement homes in ONTARIO are required to provide new tenants with this document that outlines important information including cost factors. Information on the necessary content in this package is contained in the Residential Tenancies Act.

DVA – Department of Veterans Affairs: Veterans Affairs Canada provides services, programs and funding to eligible veterans in need of assistance. For further information, you may visit www.veterans.gc.ca.

HCA – Health Care Aides: Perform tasks that are similar to those of a PSW. They usually have a Health Care Aide certificate, which is a level below the PSW certificate.

HEALTHLINK/HEALTHLINE: For general non-urgent health advice and information, it is a free confidential telephone service available by dialing 811 from your phone. Available in Quebec, BC, Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan, Alberta, New Brunswick and Newfoundland and Labrador. In Ontario, the number for the equivalent service (called Telehealth) is 1 (866) 797-0000.

LHIN – Local Health Integration Network (Ontario specific): See description on pages 12 – 13.

LTC – Long-Term Care: Denotes nursing-home level of care. See description on pages 47 – 51.

OLTCA – Ontario Long Term Care Association: See description on page 49.

ORCA – Ontario Retirement Communities Association: See description on page 23.

OT – Occupational Therapy/Therapist: A type of therapy that assists a person to become more independent with tasks involving personal care/ADLs as well as many other activities that help maintain or attain skills for living and functioning as independently as possible.

POA – Power of Attorney: A document authorizing someone else to act on your behalf. In Ontario, there are two kinds of documents – a POA for Personal Care allows someone else to make health related decisions for you when you are ill & a Continuing POA for Personal Property which allows someone to make financial decisions for you. See article on page 97.

PSW – Personal Support Workers: Are trained to aid with basic homemaking tasks such as cleaning, meal preparation and shopping, as well as personal care tasks such as bathing, personal hygiene, mobility and other activities of daily living. The Regulated Health Professions Act governs their scope of practice, but they are not regulated or registered by any government or other body.

Residential Care Homes: Long-term care homes in BC are called Residential Care Homes.

RHRA – Retirement Homes Regulatory Authority (Ontario): Are responsible for licensing and regulating Retirement Residences in Ontario. They keep a database of all homes in Ontario, handle complaints and educate the public about the Retirement Homes Act, 2010. For additional information visit www.rhra.ca. See pages 22 – 23.

RN – Registered Nurse: Requires a four-year Bachelor of Nursing/Bachelor of Science in Nursing degree for all graduates as of 2005 (prior to this RNs could also have a three-year diploma from a college). RNs are regulated by the College of Nurses.

RPN – Registered Practical Nurse: As of 2005, all new RPNs must have a two-year college diploma in Practical Nursing. Education is less comprehensive than that of an RN and geared more toward medically-stable and less complex patients. RPNs are regulated by the College of Nurses.

RHA – Retirement Homes Act, 2010 (Ontario): Is the legislation in Ontario that governs & regulates retirement homes. The RHRA is the organization that is mandated with ensuring all homes abide by the legislation. See page 44.

RTA – Residential Tenancies Act (Ontario): Is the provincial legislation that governs interactions between landlords and tenants. The RTA replaced the Tenant Protection Act (TPA) in 2007. See page 45.

Special Care Homes: Long-term care in Saskatchewan is provided in Special-care Homes.

Supportive Living: Long-term care in Alberta is called Supportive Living.

UCP – Unregulated Care Provider: Are paid care providers who may be PSWs, Personal Care Attendants, Physician Assistants and others (who work in a health care setting and provide some sort of assistance or care), who are not registered or licensed by a regulatory body (i.e. they are not governed by the Regulated Health Professions Act). In some retirement homes, they may provide personal care, assistance with ADLs and/or assist with some tasks delegated by an RPN/RN i.e. medication administration.

Downsizing Tip

Before starting to pack things up or decide what to take with you, make sure you have everything you will need handy: boxes, tape, coloured stickers, pen and paper. Use different coloured stickers for boxed items based on the room they are going into in your new home. This will assist the movers in placing the correct boxes in the rooms you need them to be in. Organize yourself in advance of the move and keep track of where all of your items are (so you know what boxes to unpack first) by numbering each box and creating a list of items in each box.

Keep in mind....

The most important factor in determining quality of care in any residence or care situation is that of the staff. You can determine this easily if you take the time to watch and listen during your visits. Watch other residents when you visit; get to know them, their families/regular visitors and talk to them. Developing relationships with both staff and residents in the home is important and will ensure that if there are issues, you are notified of them. Focus on the food quality, cleanliness and staff attitude. Join a Family Council if there is one or encourage your loved one to join a Residents' Council if they are able to participate. If you have the time, join in activities in the residence. This is a way to help your loved one adjust while creating opportunities for you to get to know other residents and staff by observing and interacting.

DID YOU KNOW?

The Alzheimer Society of Canada has a list of tips to cope with "age-related memory difficulties"

- "Keep a routine
- Organize information (keep details in a calendar or day planner)
- Put items in the same spot (always put your keys in the same place by the door)
- Repeat information (repeat names when you meet people)
- Run through the alphabet in your head to help you remember a word
- Make associations (relate new information to things you already know)
- Involve your senses (if you are a visual learner, visualize an item)
- Teach others or tell them stories
- Get a full night's sleep
- Learn more about what you can do to maintain your brain health and strengthen your memory"

◆ TORONTO ◆

TORONTO (pages 172 - 218) – In 1998 six municipalities (East York, Etobicoke, North York, Scarborough, York and Toronto) were amalgamated to create one large City of Toronto. Therefore, this section includes all of the former municipalities that now make up the current City of Toronto. Because of the size of the city and the number of homes within it, if a home has identified their former municipality, we have included it in brackets after 'Toronto' within the address line for each home. Homes are in alphabetical order within the region.

DID YOU KNOW?

People who are over 80 years old must renew their driver's license every 2 years and in order to do so must go through a vision test, driving record review, attend a group education session and an in-class cognitive screening exercise. You must make an appointment for the session (which is said to take about 90 minutes) as soon as you get your renewal notice. In rare instances, a senior will have to take a road test and/or may need to provide medical information. Drivers over 80 years old must complete this process every two years in order to maintain a driver's license. There is a nominal cost for renewal. You will need to have your renewal form, current license and if you use glasses or hearing aids, take those with you as well.

JUST A SUGGESTION...

In an emergency, one can easily get side tracked and forget important items. Create an 'emergency list' for things you will need in the event of an emergency or a situation that requires you to leave your home suddenly for what may be several hours or days. Include any assistive devices, medications, identification, and a list of contact numbers for family and doctors. For a detailed list and further information, you may also wish to download the 'Emergency Preparedness Guide for People with Disabilities/Special Needs' at https://www.emergencymanagementontario.ca/english/beprepared/diversegroups/PeoplewithDisabilities/disability_guide_english.html.

FOR USING OUR Guide!

Please feel free to contact us with feedback and suggestions for future editions at info@senioropolis.com.

Esther Karen Hemi Goldstein obtained a Bachelor degree in Science from the University of Toronto in 1986 and in Social Work from Ryerson University in 1990. She is a registered member of the Ontario College of Social Workers and Social Service Workers.

Esther worked as a hospital social worker in the Greater Toronto Area for many years, primarily with the geriatric population. A significant portion of her work involved counselling senior clients and their families about the difficult task of relocating to care homes and assisting them with the process. At the time, information about retirement residences and many other private services was limited and hard to find, so Esther created this Guide out of a need she had for this information. Over the last 22 years, the Guide evolved and expanded to become what it is today. Currently Esther works full-time on this publication, its affiliated website www.senioropolis.com[®] and her new website www.seniorcareaccess.com.

Senioropolis.com[®] continues to build its database of information on housing options and services for seniors across Canada as it strives to become a portal for “all things senior”. In 2018, Esther launched a second (member-based) site, www.seniorcareaccess.com, which enables professionals and consumers to access Retirement Consultants and Canada-wide information on senior resources and housing options incorporating comparative and competitive searches across many different dimensions.

Esther has been a member of the Stakeholders Advisory Council (SAC) of Ontario’s Retirement Homes Regulatory Authority since the Fall of 2013. At the end of 2016, Esther was appointed Chair of SAC, a position she continues to hold through 2019. Additionally, Esther volunteers her time as a member of the Board of Directors of The International Breastfeeding Centre in Toronto.

Esther shares her knowledge through article/blog contributions, media interviews and lectures/workshops on ‘Senior Living Options’ and related topics at different venues including retirement homes, community agencies and private companies and organizations.

The Forever Bond

Childhood memories vivid but fleeting....

The warmth of her embrace.
The sound of her laughter.
Her full-body 'giggle'.
The smell of her cooking,
mingled with cigarettes.
The hunch in her back.
The touch of her hands,
crippled with age.

Daily visits.....
watching soap operas;
eating soft-boiled eggs for breakfast,
and spumoni ice cream for dessert;
April Fool's jokes;
stories from The National Enquirer;
and our annual viewing of the Wizard of Oz.
A constant through childhood.
A safe haven in her arms.

When did it begin?
She looked the same but really wasn't.
When was.....
the moment that her memories began to fade;
the hour when no one was familiar;
the day when she ceased to be the person I knew.
Was there fear? Anguish? Or passive acceptance?

If I knew then, what I know now.....
Would it have made a difference?
Would I, or she, have done things differently?
Or said things left unspoken?
An unconditional acceptance and love like no other,
gone over time and in an instant.

SENIORCARE
access.com

Brought to you by:

pivotal
aging innovations inc.

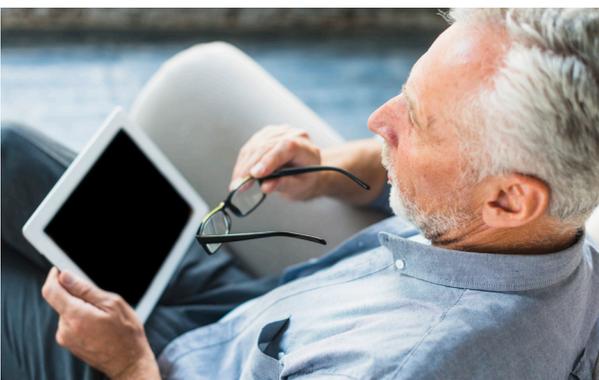

SeniorCareAccess.com is a unique online portal offering Canadian older adults and their families a one-stop-shop for their transitioning lifestyle by creating industry and professional access to an extensive resource and housing database.

The site offers to deliver professional senior services in two ways.

- 1. The Pivotal Consulting Program – This is a one-on-one consulting program providing seniors and their families an opportunity to find guidance and assistance in managing resources.
- 2. Professional Resources – Designed for direct interaction by senior service providers and interested senior consumers, we will maintain a database of resources, housing and vacancy availability allowing for focused research on service options.

In addition to the housing aspect of our site, we also have a senior-centric resource database with free access for all who visit the site.

Whether it be accessing home care, finding a REALTOR®, retrofitting, aging in place, financial preservation, estate planning, retirement home transition, dementia therapy, alternate financing, locating support groups or getting direction after the passing of a partner, SeniorcareAccess.com aims to offer dozens of services focused on Older Adults and Life Transitions.

Discover how to have your Retirement Lifestyle Solution listed for FREE (Retirement home, LTC, Adult community or senior-focused housing) or as a Service Provider, how the SeniorCareAccess portal can offer you senior-focused marketing opportunities.

Hurry, the program offers limited spaces within your category!
